EDITORIAL BRIEFS.

WE move that the people make Gen. Beaver's election unanimous.

IN the next race for the Presidency Logan will probably occupy first place

THE Republicans this year can do their whole duty by voting the whole ticket.

THERE were no braver soldiers in the war than Gen. Beaver and Col. A. Wilson Norris.

REPUBLICANS, do not promise a Democratic candidate to vote for him even though he be your best friend.

THERE is not a more popular man in the State than Thomas J. Stewart. His majority will be remarkably large.

VOTE for no man to whom the suspicion of dishonesty attaches. In doing so your vote must be cast for the Republican candidates.

OF course, the Republicans have paid their taxes, and they will unite in voting for the whole Republican ticket at the approaching election.

HON. WILLIAM T. DAVIES, candidate for lieutenant governor, is the friend of all honest men, and is especially popular with the laboring classes. Vote for him.

GEN. EDWIN S. OSBORNE was a good soldier and he is an accomplished gentleman. Statesmen are needed in Congress. Vote for him for Congressman-at-Large.

JOHN G. LOVE and G. G. Mattern are just the men we want in the Legislature Both are honest and intelligent. Mr. Love is an able speaker and Mr. Mattern s a faithful, shrewd and industrious worker.

BEFORE the Democratic administration made changes in the post-office of Phil. adelphia, the service in that city gave great satisfaction. Now it is so unsatisfactory that the citizens are rebelling against it.

A REPUBLICAN Governor and Legislature will ensure an apportionment in accordance with the party majority. A Democratic victory may make the Legislature Democratic for the next ten years. We vote for the future.

HAS General Beaver ever made a pledge to the public he failed to keep, or a promise he failed to fulfill? Has he not both in public and private life faithfully and honestly performed his duty? Has he ever been unfaithful to his country, his party, or his people? Answer these questions honestly and you will vote for him in November.

A CONSIDERABLE number of the soldiers were made to believe that the continuance of their pensions depended upon the Republicans remaining in power.—Watchman. And the spirit of that prediction has proved true. The man at the White House who never went to war vetoed the pensions of many deserving soldiers, and the indications are that he would take away the pensions from all of them if he could.

The Negro in the South.

No events could have happened tha more completely exhibit the status o the Negro in the South then those occasioned by the Knights of Labor convention in Richmond. It is a cardinal doctrine of the Knights that their members, of whatever nationality or color, are on terms of equality. It is almost unnecessary for us to observe that the same doctrine is taught by the Constitution of the United States, but in the South this part of the constitution is almost a dead letter. We say this in face of the fact that the South is solidly Democratic and the Democrats pretend to be very jealous of any infringements of the Constitution. This is an illustration of Democratic inconsistency.

We knew that the position of the negro south of the Mason and Dixon line was somewhat unenviable, but never before did we realize it so fully. It is good that the events have occurred as they more completely demonstrate his position to the entire world. Although free for two decades of years—long enough for infants to grow into maturity and for young men to approach middle age—he still occupies the position of a slave. He is not permitted to do anything or go anywhere on terms of equality. He is perhaps treated as kindly as a dog or horse, but for him to participate with the whites in any privileges or enjoyments is obnoxious to the southern sentiment. The hotels will not entertain him, the theatres refuse to admit him, the street cars will not permit him to ride. He is constantly and universally looked down upon and treated in all respects as one of the lower animals. This condition of affairs exists not only in Richmond, but in all the cities of the South. We are glad that the Knights have behaved so manfully and insisted upon giving him his rights in all their direct relations with him. Of course, they could not carry out theis determination in all that they did in Richmond. It was wise that they did not insist upon their properly accredited delegates obtaining admission to the theatre. To do that might have precipitated a riot. These people, by drawing this line of distinction in all their relations with the Negro are violating the terms of the Fifteenth amendment. They can and should be punished. It only confirms the belief that the Negro is treated the same at the polls, and hence does not often attempt to assert his right to vote.

In the same way Democratic sentiment would hold the Negro in the North if it dared to do so. But it knows that to do so would not be politic. Hence, Democrats occasionally endeavor to get his vote, though we are glad to say that they usually fail. But occasionally we hear of a Democratic Negro, and the spectacle is now presented of Rev. John Palmer seeking to aid the Democratic State candidates by asking the Republicans of his color to vote for him for Congressman-at-Large. Why will any intelligent man be so blind to his own interests?

As sure as to-morrow's sun will rise, so surely an increase of Democratic sentiment in the North will reduce the northern Negro to a similar condition of servitude.

Our Advice.

If you wish a Free Trader to represent you in the United States Senate, vote for Chauncey F. Black.

If you wish to cast a vote in advance for a Democratic President, vote for Chauncey F. Black.

If you wish to endorse the present State and National Administration, vote for Chauncey F Black.

If you approve of the rebel appointments made by Mr. Cleveland and his Cabinet, show it by voting for Chauncey F. Black.

If you want an apportionment of the State that will give a Democratic majority in the Congressional and State delegations vote for Chauncey F. Black.

If you agree with the Democracy that "the soldier business is played out" vote for Chauncey F. Black. But—if you do not, vote for General James A. Beaver and the whole Republican ticket.

CHARLESTON keeps on having her little daily shake, about the only omission being September 29, but that was Wiggin's luck. The people, however, have beccome so used to earthquakes that that they do not consider such as they are now having any great shakes.

AUSTIN F. PIKE, Republican Senator from New Hampshire, is dead. As the New Hampshire legislature has a Republican majority of sixty-nine it is comparatively certain that Mr. Pike's successor will be of the right political stamp.

Facts for Mr. Black.

In his puny attempt to pile up sins, mountains high, against the Republican party, and to extol the merits of Democracy to the skies, Chauncey F. Black, the Free Trade candidate for Governor, has forgotten so many important facts relating to Republicanism, as well as to Democracy. that we deem it our duty to refresh his memory.

We therefore remind him that the Democratic party has been inseparably identified with slavery, secession, rebellion and Free Trade. The Republican party has been inseparably identified with freedom and emancipation, the war for the preservation of the Union, and Protection to American Labor and Capital. Candidate Black, not daring a denial of these facts, is dumb as to the details of the sins of Republicanism, or to the merits of Democracy and his aggressive campaign, so profusely promised, is so languid that it looks as though it had an aggravated attack of "yaller janders."

The facts are, Mr. Black, that the curse of slavery still envelopes Democracy like the fatal breath of the Upas tree. The crime of secession and rebellion still clings to it like the slimy folds of the deadly python. The principles of British Free Trade have palsied its brain, the malediction of American Labor has consigned it to the grave, and the corpse cannot be re-animated. The Democracy of the past is dead. The Democratic party of the future—yet unborn—will not worship the English idol of Free Trade.

Inspired by the higher and holier sentiment that American Labor shall not be degraded to the level of the serfs of foreign lands, but that it shall have its just reward—a reward that secures the comfort, prosperity and happiness of American families, the stability of our free institutions, the welfare and progress of our country, and the peace and good order of society—the Republican party has again crossed swords with Democracy upon the living, vital issues of to-day, and it invites the young men of the nation to join its standard, just as they did in the struggle with Democracy to prevent the extension of human slavery into our free territories, and, later on, for the overthrow of secession and rebellion.

As the principles of Republicanism have been successful in the past, because founded upon justice, so they will be in the present contest; and in the future as in the past, the Republican party will be found battling for a just cause, and trusting in the all-wise power of Omnipotent Ruler to guide and direct it in the way that will prove the greatest good to mankind. And the greatest good to the American people demands the defeat of Chauncey F. Black, the Free Trader—the foe to American Labor and Capital.

A DEMOCRAT is one who objects to Republican principles, but who is afraid or ashamed to announce his own. His is a policy of inconsistencies. It is for Free Trade here and Tariff there according to circumstances—it is for retrenchment and reform, and yet it does neither—it professes to accept the amendments to the Constitution and yet it disfranchises both black and white Republicans in the rebel States—it professes to be loyal, and yet it idolizes Jeff. Davis and calls him the nation's patriot and statesman—it declares for freedom, and yet it would again enslave the negroes if it had the power—it claims to be loyal, and yet it selects the greatest rebels for high places under the Government. In a word it is insincere in its professions, faithless in its pledges, and dangerous to the nation as a controlling element. Look it over at your leisure and see if you can conscientiously give it your support.

THE Democrats object to discussing national issues in a State campaign. They have a holy horror of national questions, and national records, and no wonder. Had they remained in power the slave would still have tilled the fields of the South and new slave territory would have been added. The fugitive slave law would still have compelled you and I to capture and restore to their masters the runaway slave. State's rights would still be advocated and enforced, and the threat of disunion would still ring in the halls of Congress. No wonder they do not like to discuss national issues or quote national history.

WE are glad that it was not a Bellefonte lawyer who was nominated by the Republicans for prosecuting attorney. Bellefonte citizens have too many of the county offices, which properly belong to citizens of other parts of the county. G. H. Lichtenthaler lives in Philipsburg, will prosecute all the commonwealth cases without fear or favor and deserves a large majority of votes.

The Oleomargarine Law.

The following in reference to the new oleomargarine law will be of interest.

The act of Congress approved August 2, 1886, to take effect Sunday, October 31, 1886, imposes special taxes on manufacturers of and dealers in oleomargarine, and also a tax of two cents per pound on all oleomargarine found on the premises of any dealer on that day, for the payment of which taxes tax-paid stamps can be procured from the collector of internal revenue.

The special taxes will be reckoned from October 1, 1886, against those dealers who sell oleomargarine, or offer it for sale, on the day the act goes into effect; but against those who neither sell it nor offer it for sale on that day (Sunday, October 31st) the tax will be reckoned from November 1, 1886, if any sales or offers for sale are made during that month.

Special tax years commence May 1, and end April 30.

Special taxes under the act of August 2, 1886, are as follows: manufacturers of oleomargarine, per year $600, or from November 1, 1886, to April 30, 1887, $500; wholesale dealers in oleomargarine, per year, $400, or from November 1, 1886 to April 30, 1887, $240; retail dealers in oleomargarine, per year, $48, or from November 1, 1886, to April 30, 1887, $24.

All special tax payers must make returns to collectors before commencing business. Dealers are especially requested to have all stock on hand October 31, 1886, packed in wooden packages not less than ten pounds each, with proper tax-paid stamps, marks and brands affixed.

Genius Honored.

To-day, October 12th, the secret order of the Brotherhood of the Union will unveil a monument to the erratic genius, George Lippard, who was the founder of that order. George Lippard was born in Chester County, Pa., on April 10th 1822. He early came to Philadelphia. He first intended to study for the ministry but gradually drifted into literature, after dabbling in the law and journalism.

In 1847, Lippard founded the Brotherhood of the Union, at 948 North Sixth St., in Philadelphia. The principles of the order are patriotic and humane, and its object the ennoblement of humanity and liberty to the toiler. It sprang at once into prominence, and after a year or two of hard exertion, the order had been established in 33 states of the Union. The war almost killed it and it has lain almost dormant since that period. It is now reviving and fast regaining its former prominence.

It is Frost-Bitten.

A nice little scheme of the Democrats has been quietly nipped in the bud. We don't believe that the scheme would have resulted successfully even if it had been permitted to mature and blossom. It was planted on poor soil and couldn't grow. No one ever expected it to put forth any blossoms. But then it was just as well to stop it at once.

The Democrats imagined they had persuaded the Knights of Labor of the State to vote for Mr. Black for Governor. Of course he would not do such a thing. They have no reason to vote for Black and they will not, as an order, take any part in politics. To do so is contrary to their constitution. And the tendency will be to vote against a man or men who seek to ruin the order by inducing it to violate its sacred rules of government.

SPAIN is a country of queer proceedings. The recent insurrection is declared to have been a stock-jobbing operation, and now it is thought probable that the insurgents will be pardoned, owing to an Under-Secretary's mistake. When the Cabinet Council had decided to confirm the death sentence imposed by the court-martial, an Under-Secretary, misunderstanding a hurried remark made by Premier Sagasta, gave the news to the press that the decision had been in favor of pardon. The news was telegraphed all over the country and subsequent efforts at correction have caused the impression that the Queen has interposed in opposition to clemency. For fear of placing the Crown in an odious light, it is said that the Ministry will be forced to concede pardon after all.

EVERY man on the Republican ticket secured his nomination fairly and honestly. Can Democrats say as much?

He Claims the Earth.

Candidate Black son of Hon. Jeremiah Black, is killing himself off by the outlandish and ridiculous claims he is making. When a man lays claim to the entire earth, people feel like giving him a quietus. But Black, being a son of a famous man, is himself proud and arrogant, and claims to carry the State of Pennsylvania in his vest pocket. The claim which he made in Bellefonte was near akin to that. He said that he could call to his support the votes of 250,000 laboring men—meaning the Knights of Labor.

Now, it is believed that this foolish claim will bury him deep under a mountain of votes. When a man claims to own another man it makes him the master and the other man the slave. The honest workmen will resent this and will show him that they will vote as they please.

General James A. Beaver is not so proud, haughty and arrogant. He is a man of the people and owes his present eminence, not to his father, but to himself. He is a self-made man, only he was somewhat more intelligent than Chauncey Black when they went to college together and Beaver graduated first. General James A. Beaver has felt all sorts of danger. He has experienced the thrilling trial of war, he has felt the cold death-dealing bullet in his person, he has given up part of his body to the cause of patriotism; and out of the cloud of battle and from the roar of the musketry he has come a brave and noble man, more sympathetic and true by what he has seen and felt.

As he goes about from place to place making addresses we do not hear him claiming that the laboring men's votes are at his disposal. No; telling them with which party their interest lies, he leaves it with their reason and consciences, knowing full well that truth will prevail with them against error.

Hensel should have used the Western Union wires to send this little message to his candidate—"Black, don't claim the earth." But in his vanity and conceit the silly son of a great father has made the irreparable mistake of his campaign.

THE question of an eight or a ten-hour working day is being fought out now in Chicago through the strike of 15,000 employees of the twenty-one pork-packing establishments of that city. There are 5000 beef-packers content to work ten hours a day, but it is expected that the striking pork-packers will not allow their cousins of the beef trade to follow their own desires in the matter. The men employed in this wholesale butcher business are for the most part a rough and reckless set, who are likely to give considerable trouble should the contest prove a protracted and obstinate one. It is probable that the struggle will end as almost all such fights have ended before—in a concession by the employers of the eight-hour principle, but on the basis of eight hours' pay.

THE candidacy of Henry George has alarmed the Democratic politicians. Gov. Hill has taken a hand in the job of uniting the Democratic factions. Secretary Manning has been quietly active in the same direction, and Col. Dan Lamont has run over to New York from Washington, his mission being, it is thought, to convey some assurances as to what civil service reform can do in smoothing away factional feeling and appeasing the malcontents.

ON Tuesday Mr. G. G. Mattern, the Republican candidate for the legislature, was in town. Among the many thousands who thronged the streets no more genial or entertaining gentleman was seen than he. Wherever he goes he makes many friends. We believe he will be given a vote of which any one may well be proud.

IT is believed by those who can read the thoughts of Hon. William A. Wallace, of Clearfield, that he has determined to vote for Gen. J. A. Beaver for Governor and for the Republican congressional candidate.

MR. GEO. M. BOAL lives in a part of the county that deserves representation in the prothonotory's office. He is a representative citizen—a soldier during the war and now an honest farmer.

JESSE CLEAVER, of Unionville, is one of the best surveyors in the county. Citizens who want a good surveyor, no matter what his politics may be, should vote for him.

GENERAL NOTES.

There are 23 women in the new class at Cornell.

A horse in Franklin county, Tenn., catches and eats chickens.

Of 80 girls recently landed at Castle Garden 52 were red-haired.

An underground railway system is being projected in Philadelphia.

Along Soquel creek, in California, the deer have ruined acres of grape vines.

Two Chicago women write "Rev." before their names, according to the Herald.

Reading, according to the Eagle, is becoming quite a centre of the canary bird trade.

The first new peanuts were received in Norfolk, Va., on Wednesday, from Nansemond county.

Four of the prettiest girls of Caledonia, Mich., were caught stealing watermelons by moonlight.

There are about 250,000 Gaelic-speaking people in Scotland, according to a recent issue of a Scotch paper.

In the five-cent savings banks of Charleston negroes have $124 936.35 on deposit. The largest depositor has $6,000.

The citizens of Vermont hold mortgages on real estate outside of the State amounting in the aggregate to nearly $5,500,000.

There is an artesian well 1,000 feet deep in Aberdene, Neb., that throws out a number of fish that look like the ordinary brook minnow.

A blind beggar who sits on the corner of Broadway and Fifteenth street, N. Y., is said to receive from $5 to $10 a day from charitable folks.

The "Golden Beryl" mine, which is declared to have been recently discovered in Connecticut, is said to be yielding the "gems" by the ton.

An old man who has seven sons, all steamboat captains, and all in comfortable circumstances, was received into the Jersey City poor house lately.

According to a Lewisburg, Pa., paper, a number of apple trees in the track of the terrific hail storm of last August are said to be covered with blossoms.

A California paper reports that a natural gas man from Pennsylvania is raising $12,000 in San Diego to sink a well near Rossville in San Diego county.

Because there was a postoffice in Washington Territory named Kennewock, the name of the Kennewick postoffice in the same Territory has been changed to Te-he.

Uncle Jakey Tripler, the oldest Philadelphia fireman, died in Norristown on Wednesday at the age of 93. He ran with the machine from 1811 until the volunteer department was abolished.

The physical condition of steel is known to be unsettled for many hours after being rolled. Finally it comes to a state of rest, but any test of its quality before that period arrives is misleading.

Mr. Jas. Piatt, of Franklin twp, Crawford county, showed a few days since a branch broken from a prune tree which had on it a half dozen nice ripe prunes and a number of blossoms for another crop.

The new time system proposed by Prof. Lindon divides the 24 hours into 10 parts; each part into 100 parts and being nearly a minute and a-half, and each of those parts into 100, or little less than seconds.

A deer, described as a beautiful specimen of his kind, joined a herd of cows that were being driven home by a Mrs. Moore, of Ashland, N H, and permitted her to secure him after he had walked into the barn.

Divers are examining the bottom of Lake Quinsigamond for relics of the ancient owner of the soil whose camping ground was on the shores. The divers are employed by the Worcester Natural Historical Society.

Lord Lonsdale is the first Englishman of prominence within recollection who has spent a week in New York without enjoying club hospitality. A member of the Union Club who wanted to register him as a visitor raised quite a storm.

A big eagle that measured nine feet from tip to tip, captured last year near Binghamton, N. Y., was released the other day. On its leg is a brass tag giving the date of its liberation, and offering cash prizes for the return of the bird.

One of the features of the Clarion (Pa.) fair was a thoroughbred dark red, short horn Durham bull calf exhibited by Vice President T. M. Kahle, of Shippenville, which, though but seven months old, is about as large as the average full-grown bull.

Dynamite has been used for driving piles in Pesth. A cast-iron plate is put on top of the pile and a charge of 17½ ounces of dynamite exploded on it. The effect is equal to five blows of a pile engine having a weight of 14¾ Vienna cwt. and a stroke of 10 feet.

Glendower Evans Brown, of Campobello, N. B. has not only a fine name but a fine lot of living ancestors. His father's father and mother and grandfather and grandmotner are alive, and so are his mother's father and mother and grandmother and her father and mother.

Reuben Smink, while at work on the roof of the Electric Light Company's building, at Reading, found several drops of blood on his hand which apparently came from a wounded bird flying over head, though no bird could be seen. The drops were as large as a dime.

The Peconic Bay Oyster Association met at Riverhead, Long Island, and found from the reports submitted that oysters can be grown profitably in the waters of the bay. Last May 2,800 bushels of seed oysters were planted. They are now full size for the English market, and 5,600 bushels will be gathered for shipment to Liverpool.

Poetry.

THREE STAGES OF BASEBALL.

I recollect, before baseba l became a pastime national,
And ere the betting on it was so wreckless and irrational;
Before the days of leagues and ere the pitcher acrobat cal
Compelled the spinning sphere to make its present curves erratical,
The man behind the bat, who now, protected, fumes and fidgets—
Was wont to catch the swiftest balls with unprotected digits.
Nor would he alter in the least his mein serene and jocular
When madly-rushing foul tips smashed his nose or closed his occular.
The catcher of the present faces volleys hot and curving,
And scarcely can be blamed because he finds the work unnerving.
Although I'm no poltroon, I do beseech you don't think that o' me;
I don't like things conducive to an incomplete anatomy.
The gentleman who now disports behind the bat of willow
Is guarded by an armor like a cushion or a pillow,
Although his mask gives him a look which certainly is comical,
No foul tip bids him make investigations astronomical,
And now, methinks, we shall behold the catcher of futurity
Cavorting 'round behind the bat in absolute security.
His helmet and his brassess, and his other things ormorial
Will most assuredly prevent all injuries corporeal.
With iron gauntlets on his hands, a bird cage on his vissage,
Oh, happy will the catcher be who plays baseball in his age.
For he cannot be damaged by the spinning missile spherical
Unless by some occurrence scarce less wondrous than a miracle.

THE HAPLESS GUEST.

After I take my seat no waiter comes
To ask my order or remove the crumbs,

On lightning wings by me he oft doth pass,
But pours no water in my gaping glass.

Altho' I drum away with fork and knife,
I cannot make him hear to save my life.

Ah! now I see him swiftly to me glide,
Like a tobogan down a white hill-side.

He takes my order, then he shoots away,
In half an hour returns with loaded tray.

And hurls the soup before me with a hum,
Leaving therein the impression of his thumb.

Then scales the check that hits me in the eye,
And for the kitchen like a hawk doth fly.

I'd like to own the waiter for awhile,
I'd ——

The editor positively refuses to publish what the writer says he would do with the waiter.

A MEMORY.

She dropped her glove—
Perhaps in love;
He stooped and picked it up.
She flushed and smiled,
The artless child,
And asked him come and sup.
He answered "No,"
And turned to go,
And blushed beneath her glance.
And off he went—
For when he bent
He'd badly split his pants.

Our Story Teller.

THE WHITE LADY.

[Continudd.]

"That is Bertie!" he said; and in a minute she was kneeling beside him, her face hidden on his breast.

Mrs. Leonhardt and Miss Tredegar were with her; and even in that scene of distress I could not help being struck by the contrast between their gay dresses and the misery and suffering around. Miss Leonhardt was dressed like a Louis XVI. marquise, her hair powdered and little patches on her fair face, from which every shade of color had departed; but she was quite calm.

Mrs. Leonhardt looked at me questioningly; but I could only shake my head in silence. Guy, from his pillow, smiled at her, and held out one hand to his sister. Poor Jean Tredegar! The beautiful dark face looked in its anguish as if it were turned to stone; the girl's tall slim figure, quaintly dressed in a straight simple gray gown, a white kerchief knotted around her throat, seemed bent and bowed under the load of her despair. She was thinking, she told me afterwards, of her brother's parting words to Miss Leonhardt a few days previously—"Heaven help you, my child!" Were they prophetic? Softly came Bertie's voice breaking the silence.

"Do you suffer much, my dearest?"

"Not much, mignonne—a numbed sensation, that is all. Palmer says I shall not suffer."

"Thank Heaven! Have you anything to say to me, Guy? Is there anything I can do or continue for you?"

How silver-clear the sweet tones were!

"Yes—much. Bertie, you know I was warned of this. I saw—our White Lady—so I made my will in town. Tredegar is yours, my darling! Be kind to our people there—when you can—it will hurt you yet a while. Come and live there—and do my work; and, my dearest, if you ever bring some one there to help and guide you—I shall be glad to know—that you are happy!"

She raised her eyes to his in mute reproach.

"It is hard for you, my poor pet," he said, "but not harder than for others. Ah, Bertie, there is so much to do and so little time to do it in! If I had known—— Ah, well, my half-day's work is done! Hush, Bertie! Don't grieve—poor dear!"

She bent over him and kissed him in silence.

"Take care of auntie Gracie—I leave her to you; and, Bertie—— Who is that? Oldham! Don't look so grieved, old fellow!"

"Oh, Guy, I would have died for you!" he said, bending over him, his very lips pale with anguish.

"Dear old friend, it is better thus. Mrs. Leonhardt, you will make him happy. Bertie"—with a faint happy smile—

"Yonder the silver-footed light
Is stealing along the sand.'

Mignonne, can you sing it for me just once?"

Could she? Ah, woman's love, so strong and true! Softly the rich voice rose, tremulous at first, then growing firmer as she went on—

"'Heavy, heavy the laden net
Weary the fishers be;
The stormy hair of the wind is wet,
And he dashes his tears in the sea.
Drenched with the cold and angry night,
Pull, brave hearts, for the land;
Yonder the silver-footed light
Is stealing along the sand.
Toil for a little moment yet,
Sad heart, aching brow;
Loose not hold of the straining net—
It will soon be over now.
Higher and higher the sunbeams climb;
Fear not, ye sea-beat crew!
One who faced the storm in His time
Is waiting to welcome you.'"

Her voice failed, and her head sank forward on his breast. He laid his hand tenderly on the bowed head.

"Thanks, darling—raise me a little. Oldham, tell my people—that I ask—nay, I claim all their allegiance, all their love for Bertie. Mignonne, where are you? It is getting dark—I cannot see you. Do you remember, little one, ce que—Dieu garde—est bien gardé?"

His head fell back on the tender arm which supported him; he opened his eyes with one loving look at her; she pressed her lips to his with one last lingering kiss; and Guy Tredegar, the gentle, noble, and true, was dead.

* * * * * *

Tredegar Hall is dull enough now; but Bertie Leonhardt and Jean Tredegar live there, nobly fulfilling Guy's trust. Each lovely face is very still and pale; but calm and happy are the two fair women in their lonely home. Perhaps

"They who descry the Lord on the beach
Launch out to the deep no more."

It seems to me sometimes, looking at Bertie as she sits in the old-fashioned carved pew in Tredegar church, the light from a stained window above falling on the face so still, so white, that she looks like "a sainted lady of olden time" who is strong and proud to endure—as if the "silver light stealing along the sand" had lingered on her face.

A year later Mrs. Leonhardt and Lord Oldham were married; and they often visit Tredegar Hall. She is as beautiful as ever, and radiantly happy in her husband's love. Two beautiful children, a noble-looking Guy and a pretty blonde Bertie, accompany them now.

* * * * * * *

Mr. Paliser and I cannot agree on the subject of the White Lady of Tredegar. He says that no such person ever existed, and that the early deaths of the Tredegars were a series of mere coincidences, nothing more, and that Guy's vision and the bird in Miss Leonhardt's bed-room were creatures of an excited nervous imagination. From what I know of Guy Tredegar, he was the last man in the world to be nervous or imaginative; and Lady Oldham speaks of "our quiet Bertie." But what I say is of little moment; and others will admit that there are more things in heaven and earth than are dreamt of in our philosophy.

A QUILLE PENNE.

UNLUCKY NED.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "ADDIE'S HUSBAND," "MADAME'S DAUGHTER," "DOCTOR PALMER'S PATIENT," &C. &C.

One dull November day, some twelve or fifteen years ago, the Adelaide, homeward-bound from Melbourne, sighted the misty shores of Hampshire. Her deck was crowded with passengers, gathered in eager groups, peering with anxious glowing eyes at the beloved land bathed in the chilly fog, where so many dear and long-lost friends awaited their return, to welcome them with loving arms to cheerful firesides, after their long journey across the mighty waste of water.

Apart from any of the excited groups stood two men in whose bosoms the first appearance of the brine-washed walls of England evidently awoke no such feelings of longing enthusiasm. One was a young fellow about twenty-two years of age, a stalwart, ruddy, hatchet-faced son of the "bush," muffled up to the eyes in a skin rug, and decidedly not very agreeably impressed by the atmosphere of the coast in early winter. He was the son of an extensive sheep-farmer, of colonial birth and education, visiting the home of his forefathers for the first time, without any prospect of a warm reception from the distant cousins and remote kinsfolk who were probably scarcely aware of his existence. His companion, one Edward Ross, was a tall weather-stained man in the prime of life, a man with a brown, careworn face, heavily bearded, and with weary listless eyes. These two, without any previous acquaintance, had been thrown much together during the long voyage, had smoked and paced the decks by the hour daily, discussing the prospects and politics of the land they were leaving behind, yet scarcely ever touching on personal topics, though Jack Irving, the younger man, often alluded casually to the paternal home "up country," and quoted the various experiences of the "governor" and "mater" in their agricultural career. The other however had never once spoken of or seemed to claim any ties of kindred or of friendship in either hemisphere. All Irving knew of him was that he was of English birth, had gone out to the Colonies fortune-hunting, and was now returning, his pockets very comfortably lined indeed, after some dozen years of hard work.

"Well, I can't congratulate you, old fellow, on the cheerful aspect of your native land!" exclaimed Irving, breaking a long silence. "It isn't exactly what I should call an enlivening prospect; and yet, to judge by the expression of our fellow-passengers' phizes, one would think we were standing at the portals of Paradise. Ugh! I don't think I shall ever feel warm again! How does it affect you, Ross? You certainly don't seem intoxicated with patriotic rapture!"

Ross turned round slowly, and said dreamily—

"Irving, did you ever read the story of Enoch Arden?"

Mr. Irving shook his head; fiction, either in prose or poetry, had not been much in his line hitherto.

"It is, I think, the saddest story ever written," resumed the other, half speaking to himself—"the story of a man who years ago left his wife and family, to whom he was devotedly attached, in order to make some money for them—for life was a hard struggle in the old world, which was their home. He was absent many years, endured many hardships, including shipwreck, and at last managed to struggle back, only to find his wife, who had long since believed him dead, married to another man. At night he stole to the window of her home, and saw her seated by her fireside, a baby in her arms, and other children, including his own, gathered round her, making a rosy picture of peace, comfort, and serene happiness."

"Well, what did he do? Burst up the picture of serene happiness pretty quick, I guess!"

"No; he crept away and kept the secret of his existence until he died, which was a short time afterwards."

"Oh, he did, did he? Well, I don't think much of your Enoch What's-his-name. I dare say Mrs. E. had the best of the bargain in No. 2."

"Irving," said Ross, after a few seconds' pause, taking no notice of this trenchant criticism, "would you care to listen to the story of my life? I—I feel somehow in a mood to unbosom myself to-night. I suppose it's the breath of home that thus moves me to speak to you, a comparative stranger, of people and events which have lain buried in my brooding brain for so many silent years—so many years that I sometimes fear my judgment may have become warped by the constant contemplation of dead grievances and past sorrows. You are young and fresh, your mind is free from the blight of disappointment, from the distempered fancies of a soured life—that is why I now seek your sympathy, your advice, by thus thrusting my dismal story on you."

"My dear fellow," exclaimed Irving heartily, "pray don't make so many excuses! I should like—very much like—to hear your story indeed, if its narration would be any relief to you. We have chummed together very pleasantly, you and I; and, though I do not think I am of a particularly prying nature, or take any superfluous interest in my neighbors' affairs, still I do confess to a little curiosity about your antecedents; and I have often wondered what made you so different from the garrulously complacent menagerie we've been cooped up with for the last three months. My sympathy I promise you freely; and, as to advice—well, you ought to have a considerable stock of that valuable commodity on hand!"

"Then light your pipe, my boy; it will help you to digest my doleful yarn more kindly," said Ross; then, leaning against the side of the vessel, his sad eyes fixed on the murky water, he began his story in a dull monotonous voice which never varied until the end, Irving interrupting only by an approving or sympathetic grunt now and then, which he did not seem to hear.

"Edward Heyland is my name: but Ned—'unlucky Ned'—is the earliest one I remember, conferred on me, by a baptism prior even to the ecclesiastical one, three days after my entrance into the world, when I was rescued half drowned from my bath, into which I had somehow slipped from the nurse's arms, face downwards. You see, Irving, I am letting you off nothing. You are having my biography from the year one.

"My father was a country doctor in the West of England; and the day I, his fourth son, saw the light deprived him of a loving and beloved wife, the mainstay of his humble and crowded home. With my first breath I brought misfortune with me, misfortune from which my poor father never rallied; he became despondent, his health began to fail, his practice diminished yearly, and he died when I was about five. My brothers, many years older than I, were already fighting their way in the world, and a maiden aunt, my godmother, who had a comfortable property in Government Funds, took pity on my neglected desolate childhood and placed me in a large endowed school, where for several years I lived, to earn the nickname so appropriately bestowed in the nursery. I was certainly a most unfortunate little wretch—in fact, my ill-luck was so proverbial that I came to be excluded from all matches of sporting interest; for, on whichever side I played in cricket, football, hockey, et-cætera, that was bound to be the losing one. I do not know that I was more clumsy, stupid, or incapable than the others; but I know that I was caned oftener than the greatest dunce in the school, and that, though naturally of a quiet and retiring disposition, I somehow found myself mixed up in every lawless prank, every rowdy freak on foot, and of course was always the first found out.

When I was about eighteen years of age, my aunt died, leaving me five hundred instead of five thousand pounds she had led me to expect would be mine. The change, I afterwards learned, was due to some hasty words of mine, uttered one day in a fit of irritation which I forgot the next moment, that were repeated to her. And, though Heaven knows I had spoken of her kindly, gratefully, affectionately scores of times—for I was fond of the old woman in my way—yet, with my usual luck, she never heard of this, and her property was divided between my two surviving brothers, who refused to refund me a penny, contending that I had got quite enough out of my aunt during her lifetime. We parted in anger, and I never met them again.

"I went to London, and got employment in a wine-merchant's office at a salary of eighty pounds per annum. My chief was a sordid, crabbed old money-grubber; but he had 'one fair daughter,' and her I loved from the first day I saw her. There was nothing strange in that, for Alice Willoughby was the fairest, sweetest woman I ever knew; but the odd thing was that she should love me in return—for I had nothing attractive in me. I was poor, unknown, a shy, awkward, commonplace boy—and yet she loved me—my pretty Alice! She had of course many other suitors, one of them an opulent merchant and ship-broker, whom her father was very anxious she should marry; and, when he discovered the secret of our attachment, his wrath knew no bounds, and he drove me with coarse contumely from his services. I did not mind much, for I carried with me his daughter's heart and her promise to be true at all costs. I looked about me for new employment, and fell upon my feet in a way most unexpected—got a clerkship at one hundred and eighty pounds per annum in a new insurance-office started on principles which promised to make every shareholder's fortune in a few years. I at once invested my five hundred pounds, and, after I had received my first quarter's salary, raised a hundred pounds on the security of my prospects, furnished a modest little cottage at Camberwell, and persuaded Alice to elope and marry me, for she was in trouble, as her father was 'pressing her sair' to marry the man of his choice.

"For a few months after this we were serenely happy, though my dear wife fretted a good deal because of the estrangement from her father, who refused ever to receive me as a son-in-law. I tried to console her, tried also to keep from her the clouds which I saw already gathering on the luckless horizon of my life. I had just three months of sunshine, and before I was a year married the crash which I had been tremblingly expecting came suddenly. The insurance-company burst up—it was nothing more than a fraudulent bubble—the board of influential directors vanished into space, and three of the leading men decamped with the remnant of principal invested by me and other gulls of my kind. I and another wretched clerk, found clinging helplessly to the wreck, were cast into prison as aiders and abettors of the fraud; my furniture was seized by indignant creditors; and my poor wife, in a delicate state of health, found herself standing alone, unprotected and utterly penniless, in the streets of London.

"At this crisis I had to make the bitterest appeal I think it could be any man's fate to make—I had to write and ask her father to shelter her until I was free. He did so; and, when some time later the law decreed that I was a pitiful dupe, not a brazen accomplice, he sent for me and offered me a hundred pounds to emigrate at once to the Colonies, promising to support my wife and child until I had made sufficient money, to keep those dependent on me from the gates of the workhouse. He spoke with a cruel temperateness which cut me like a knife, for there was reason in what he said.

"'With the ruin, the misery, the almost hopeless blight, you have brought on the head of my dear daughter, the only being I love in the world, I do not reproach you now, Heyland; I leave that to your own conscience.

"How is your husband, Mrs. Finucane?" "Nicely, thank you; he's down in the country for a short time." "I presume you hear from him right along?" "Oh, yes, every week. He's one of the promptest men with the alimouy I ever met in my life."

THE BADGE OF SILENCE.

Perhaps you young people might think our grandmother harsh, children are so petted and spoilt nowadays. But she was a dear, kind, good old lady, and well it was we fell into her hands when our sweet young mother died.

John, little Davy and I—my name was Elizabeth, but the boys called me Bess—went to live in the old home when I was about ten years old, and I do not in the least doubt that the next two years were the very hardest of grandma's life.

I know I must have been a terrible trial, and how she could have been as patient I do not see. I was not only a very selfish child, but impatient and overbearing. I would not endure the least bit of teasing from the boys, and yet almost tormented the life out of them.

One morning it had been raining since breakfast, and we were all three in rather a gloomy mood. Grandma had reproved me more times than I can remember for speaking in a cross, ugly way, for teasing and aggravating the boys, and at last with a heavy sigh she said in a solemn tone: "I see there is no help for it, Elizabeth; I have tried every other means, you must wear 'The Badge of Silence.' I used it for your Uncle John once; he never needed it again, but it has lain ever since in my chest of drawers."

Her tone was so serious, her face so gloomy and hopeless, I could scarcely have felt more shocked or puzzled had she proposed using the guillotine. "The Badge of Silence." What could it be. It had not killed Uncle John, though, for I had seen him only the day before, and he looked strong and well. My brothers John and Davy seemed almost as much impressed by grandma's manner as I was, and, like myself, were watching her movements with the keenest anxiety.

Very slowly she crossed the room as if on some important errand, opened the bottom drawer of the chest, and after removing several articles drew from its depths a vivid red cotton handkerchief; there were bright yellow spots all over it, and the thing was so ugly that I instinctively shrank as she came with it towards me. She laid it carefully on the table, folded it from two opposite corners, made a bias bandage, and, placing it under my chin, drew the two ends up over my head and tied them in a secure knot.

"Now," she said, gravely, "it must be as though you were dumb; you must not speak a word under any circumstances. Perhaps by giving your tongue an entire rest it may lose the habit of speaking in such a sinful manner. Alas! the tongue is an unruly member, you are not to use it again this whole day. I trust that will prove sufficient, and that you need not wear the badge to-morrow."

At first I could scarcely believe it true, I, Bess, the wilful, petted Bess, standing in the middle of the floor, a re cotton handkerchief bound about my face as if afflicted with toothache, and John and Davy, their solemnity all vanished, standing in the corner slyly laughing at me.

This, then, this horrid old handkerchief, was the Badge of Silence. In my anger and indignation I almost wished it had been the guillotine instead, and that my head had been actually cut off. I opened my lips to ask if I might go to my room, but grandma's warning finger reminded me of her hope that the badge would not be needed to-morrow, and I closed them again. She gently led me to a seat by the window, placed a glass of water by my side, then returned to her rocking-chair and knitting.

I could see that John was almost suffocating with mirth, that his handkerchief was stuffed into his mouth, and that he was shaking all over, but I pretended not to look at him and turned towards the window, quite forgetting that I could be easily seen from the village street.

Directly my best friend, Fannie Lewis, came hurrying by under an umbrella, the rain had almost ceased now, and, looking up suddenly, she came hastening in. Before she had reached the room my cheeks were scarlet and my whole heart in a tumult of rebellion. I looked up, but grandma lifted her finger and I did not dare move.

"Oh, I'm so sorry!" exclaimed Fannie, bursting into the room; "are you suffering much, Bess; when did it begin to hurt you?"

But grandma interrupted, "I am sorry, too, dear, it isn't a tooth hurting her, but a very bad temper and an unruly tongue. I am trying to cure her with the Badge of Silence. She will be glad to see you another day."

With a perplexed face Fannie retired, and horrified lest some one else might discover me I turned from the window.

Only a little while later, when the rain had quite ceased, Aunt Grace came dashing up in her pretty carriage; she had come to take me out to the florist's two miles in the country to buy plants. But "no," said grandma very positively.

"She is wearing the Badge of Silence; she would hardly like to go with it about her head. You remember the day your brother John wore it, do you not, Grace?"

Aunt Grace assented, and there was an odd, suspicious look about the corners of her lips, but she hastened away.

The dinner-bell rang, and mine was brought on a tray by a mischievous little servant, who giggled outright when she saw me. I did not taste a thing, and sat in sullen silence during the whole afternoon. At last the twilight came, the boys were playing in the yard, and I quite alone in the darkened chamber; I heard their merry voices and the low hum of grandma's voice in conversation with a visitor on the piazza.

Oh, what a lonely, desolate place the world seemed to me that night, but I began to think.

Why was it—how did my trouble come—why was I not with the boys laughing away the perfumed twilight? Alas, I began to realize it was all my own fault. The trouble was the result of my own sin, and the boys were probably happier without than with me.

When these thoughts at last made their way through my brain, a torrent of tears came with them. I bowed my head on my arms in the broad window seat and quivered under the storm of grief, contrition and mortification which swept over me.

I did not remember ever in all the eleven years of my life to have felt so before, and doubtless the long, silent day had much to do with it. I recognized for the first time that sin will surely bring its own punishment, sooner or later. If we are unkind, disagreeable and silfish, the time will come when we will miss the love that our own conduct has banished. If we are cross and uncharitable in conversation the time will come when we will sit silent in our home, needing companionship. It is no small ambition to aim at winning the love of all about us, for this will be only a stepping stone to the love of our Heavenly Father. At last when my tears had spent themselves, I felt a cool, soft hand on my tear-stained cheek. I did not move until grandma drew a chair to my side—then I threw my arms about her neck and humbly begged her forgiveness.

I will not tell you all her gentle words, but when I lay down that night in my own little bed there was a new feeling in my heart, a new life and ambition. I never wore the Badge of Silence again, but for a long time it was frequently brought to my mind, and I assure you I needed the reminder. My hot temper and unreasonable impatience would sometimes get the better of me, and I needed to recall the pain of that sad day and the better thoughts and resolutions of the twilight hour. Perhaps this little story will lead some children to think more of the love that surrounds them, and try to win it by gentleness and goodness, rather than turn it away by unkindness and ill temper.

ANNAH ROBINSON WATSON.

Subduing a Bull

Long ago on one of Mr. Gladstone's former visits to Lake Tergensee, Bavaria, he and a party were going along a road hewn in the side of the mountain and overhanging a precipice. The road was one of those which are too narrow to permit the passage of two carriages, but which are provided with niches hewn in the rock in which one carriage may remain while the latter passes. After passing a sudden turn in the road, a herd of cattle, headed by an enormous bull, met the carriage containing Mr. Gladstone and party. The bull, instead of going aside, obstinately waited just in front of the carriage, and the youthful herdsmen were unable to move him from where he had taken up his position. Nor was the driver's whip, which was vigorously applied to the bull's back, of any use, for, instead of frightening the bull, the lashing excited the horses, which began to rear and shy till the situation became highly critical. The ladies shrieked, and were about to jump out of the carriage, when at the last moment Mr. Gladstone jumped down, took one of the wraps, approached the bull sideways, and threw the blanket over the animal's head. The surprised bull stood motionless, and allowed a rope to be tied across his horns and his feet to be tethered. Obedient as a lamb he followed his leader, who led him back to a less narrow part of the road, the whole herd following close behind. Mr. Gladstone turned aside complimentary remarks by saying: "Never mind; it is the same with this fellow as it is with John Bull. You must catch him by the horns if you want to overpower him."

He was Very Tired.

Major Gassaway, a San Antonio lawyer, was engaged by a man accused of horse stealing.

"Are you really guilty?" asked the lawyer.

"Why, major, if I was innocent, what earthly use would I have for a lawyer? I'm so guilty that I reckon you had better get another lawyer to help you."

All Sorts.

"Give me about a dollar 'n-a-half's werth of quinine," said a sad-looking young man to the druggist. "Why, what do you want with so much for?" "Well, you see, I've been around to see my girl and I've just got the worst case of shake I ever heard of. Make that an even two dollars' worth, will you?"

Proprietor of Museum—You have a new freak to present? Agent—Yes. "He defies every law of nature?" "Yes." "He is a profound puzzle to medical science?" "Yes." "Ah! we will likely strike a bargain. Oh!—another question: Has he appeared before all the crowned heads of Europe?" "N-o." "Then I don't want him."

The ingenious French play all manner of tricks with gooseberries. They crystalize them, they pulp them, they strain off the seeds, they preserve them, they make a fine jelly of them, which is peculiarly useful in fevers; they make a liquor, a syrup, and excellent ices. They mix their compote of strawberries or raspberries with gooseberry jelly, as well as the ices, dragées, syrups, marmalades and crystalized comfitures.

Reporter—About an inch.

City Editor—Well, I saw a little boy going in that direction with a pair of skates slung over his shoulder. You had better saunter down that way.

Reporter—Shall I stop him from going on the ice?

AN EXTRAORDINARY OFFER.

To All Wanting Employment.

We want Live, Energetic and Capable Agents in every county in the United States and Canada, to sell a patent article of great merit, ON ITS MERITS. An article having a large sale, paying over 100 per cent profit, having no competition, and on which the agent is protected in the exclusive sale by a deed given for each and every county he may secure from us. With all these advantages to our agents and the fact that it is an article that can be sold to every house-owner, it might not be necessary to make an "EXTRAORDINARY OFFER" to secure good agents at once, but we have concluded to make it to show, not only our confidence in the merits of our invention, but in its salability by any agent that will handle it with energy. Our agents now at work are making from $150 to $600 a month clear and this fact makes it safe for us to make our offer to all who are out of employment. Any agent that will give our business a thirty days' trial and fail to clear at least $100 in this time, ABOVE ALL EXPENSES, can return all goods unsold to us and we will refund the money paid for them. Any agent or general agent who would like ten or more counties and work them through sub-agents for ninety days and fail to clear at least $750 ABOVE ALL EXPENSES, can return all unsold and get their money back. No other employer of agents ever dared to make such offers, nor would we if we did not know that we have agents now making more than double the amount we guaranteed; and but two sales a day would give a profit of over $125 a month, and that one of our agents took eighteen orders in one day. Our large descriptive circulars explain our offer fully, and these we wish to send to everyone out of employment who will send us three one cent stamps for postage. Send at once and secure the agency in time for the boom, and go to work on the terms named in our extraordinary offer. We would like to have the address of all the agents, sewing machine solicitors and carpenters in the country, and ask any reader of this paper who reads this offer, to send us at once the name and address of all such they know. Address at once, or you will lose the best chance ever offered to those out of employment to make money. RENNER MANUFACTURING CO.,

The Telephone of 1664.

And as glasses have highly promoted our seeing, so 'tis not improbable, but that there may be found many mechanical inventers to improve our other senses, of hearing, smelling, tasting, touching. 'Tis not impossible to hear a whisper a furlong's distance, it having been already done; and perhaps the nature of the thing would not make it more impossible, though that furlong should be ten times multiplied. And though some various authors have affirmed it impossible to hear through the thinnest plate of Muscovy glass, yet I know a way by which it is easy enough to hear one speak through a wall a yard thick.

It has not yet been thoroughly examined how far Otocousticons may be improved, nor what other ways there may be of quickening our hearing, or conveying sound through other bodies than the air; for that is not the only medium. I can assure the reader that I have, by the help of a distended wire, propagated the sound to a very considerable distance in an instant, or with as seemingly quick a motion as that of light, at least, incomparably swifter than that, which at the same time was propogated through the air, and this not only in a straight line, or direct, but in one bended in many angles.—From works of Robert Hooke, published in 1664.

A Pretty Girl.

He was rather sentimental, and he and his friends were in the park. A little ways off two ladies were seated. One of them was very pensive, and extremely pretty. She was resting her cheek on her hand, and her eyes were full of far-off contemplation.

"She is pretty isn't she?" said he. "By Jove, I'm falling in love with that girl. I wonder who the fellow is she's thinking about? I say, wouldn't it be pleasant to think a pretty girl like that could sit and dream about you as she is dreaming about somebody. Let's walk past and look at her."

So they walked slowly past. The maiden was still wrapt in contemplation and as they passed, her companion said quite distinctly:

"Now, Emily, this is all foolishness Let's go to Dr. —and let him take the tooth out."—[San Francisco Chronicle.]

Baby's bath from his birth should be of daily occurrence; the water tepid, castile or some other pure soap being used. Be very careful about the purity of the latter, as baby's skin is so tender and easily irritated. A very good way with babies born in the fall or winter is to bathe them thoroughly one day, the next only the face, hands and feet, rubbing the little body with olive oil. Too much cannot be said of proper rubbing at such times; it improves the circulation and in time makes the flesh more solid. At three months the bands can be finally removed; not any sooner if you want your child to have a straight, strong back. Earlier than this time he should not be allowed to sit erect without support, no matter how much he may want to do so.

Why She was Worried.

——Millionaire Pa—Ah! good morning Bridget. You look worried.

Bridger—Sure, sir, the beautiful geraniums around there is all spoiled.

"My stars! After all my trouble. How did it happen?"

"Your daughter fell on them, sur."

"Fell on them! Why, how could she?"

"It was jumping out of the window last night, sur."

"Great snakes! Why did she do that?" "To elope with the gardener, sur."—Omaha World.

Manchester (N. H.) Union: At Swiftwater, M. R. Tewksbury and W. C. Young caught a large bear in a trap. The bear was shot and proved to be a female. The trap was again set, and Tuesday morning, the 7th, they had one of the cubs. The old one measured 6½ feet from tip to tip, and if in good flesh would have weighed nearly 400 pounds. The cub weighs about 30 pounds and is a lively fellow.

When the room in which the family sits during the evening is left for the night, the chairs should be placed close against the walls. Sometimes a person goes back in the dark to get some article, the exact location of which he remembers, and if chairs were left in the middle of the room he might come to grief. Some of the accidents that occur in darkness might be avoided if the hands and feet were used more slowly.

If you wish to have a chicken for dinner, and it is rather small for your family, you can help it out by cooking with it two or three nice slices of salt pork, and, just before dishing it, toast a few crackers and lay around the dish it is to be served in, or in place of crackers you can use bread or biscuit.

A Fearful Holocaust in Cincinnati.

CINCINNATI, O., October 10.—This morning, between 2 and 3 o'clock, August Becker's residence and tailoring establishment, at No. 67 Moore street, was discovered to be on fire. Fifteen minutes were wasted in an attempt to turn in an alarm, and by the time of the arrival of the Department the place was thoroughly cleaned out. In searching among the ruins two dead bodies were found. They were those of Margaret Link, aged 60 years, and her daughter, aged 18 years. They occupied rooms on the third floor, and had evidently arisen, but had been unable to force their way through the smoke and flames Pecuniary loss will not exceed $5,000.

A Disabled Steamer.

NEW YORK, October 10.—A dispatch this afternoon from St. Johns, N. F., states that the steamer Anchoria is seventy miles off shore with a broken shaft. A steamer will leave St. Johns immediately to render assistance.

Additional advices from St. Johns say the news from Anchoria was brought in by a boat which left the steamer Friday and arrived at port this afternoon. Miranda is the name of the steamer dispatched to the Anchoria's assistance. It is probably that further news will be received by an early hour to-morrow morning.

ST. JOHNS, N. F., October 10.—The Anchoria's life boat, which arrived here this afternoon, was under command of her First Officer. The Anchoria's main shaft is broken and she lies under canvas about seventy miles off Cape Spear, bearing east south east. The passengers and crew were all well.

Blaine's Tour.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 9.—Arrangements are now completed for the proposed tour of James G. Blaine through Pennsylvania. He will speak in this city next Saturday evening, at the Academy of Music, and on Monday morning starts for Pittsburg, reaching Downingtown about 11 o'clock, where the train will halt for an hour to enable Blaine and Beaver to make speeches. The special train will then proceed to Lancaster, reaching there about 2 p. m, where a two hours' halt will take place and speeches be made by Blaine, Beaver, Charles E. Warwick and Major Wendell P. Bowman. The run will be made to Harrisburg, at which place Blaine will become the guest of Senator Cameron, who will probably preside at the mass meeting in the evening of Monday, the 18th. On Tuesday morning the run will be made to Lewistown, reaching there about 1 p. m., halting for an hour's meeting; thence to Huntingdon, reaching there about 1 p. m., where speech-making for an hour will follow; thence on to Altoona, remaining there from 3 to 5 p. m.; thence to Johnstown, remaining there from 6 to 7 p. m.; thence stopping at Greensburg, say from 8 to 9, reaching Pittsburg about 10 p. m.

From the Knights.

RICHMOND, Va., October 10.—The majority of the Knights of Labor here attended morning services at some of the numerous churches and this aiternoon drove or strolled about the city. Mr. Powderly went to high mass at St. Patrick's church this morning, but this afternoon was kept busy attending to numerous matters connected with the work of the convention to which it was necessary to give personal attention.

Ordered Back to Work.

PHILADELPHIA, October 11.—The executive board of district assembly No. 1, Knights of Labor, this morning ordered the striking stove moulders to return to work at the rates in force previous to September 7, when the strike commenced. There was a stormy scene at the assembly meeting. A number of prominent leaders of the strike were present and violently opposed the order of the board. Their opinions, however, were overruled and the order went into effect. At the various stove foundries in the city the strikers applied for work individually and not as members of the Knights of Labor. Not more than half of them were taken back, as the manufacturers said that the strike had seriously crippled the winter trade, and they would not have use for them.

A Student Murdered.

RALEIGH, N. C., Oct. 11.—At the state university, Capel hill, Saturday night, Jacob A. Freeze, a student from Rowen county, was shot through the heart and instantly killed and another student named Fleming wounded by a negro named Brewer. In the early part of the night there was a quarrel between several negroes and young Freeze and two other students. About midnight the students went to Brewer's house for the purpose of renewing the quarrel and while the students stood at the door calling the inmates they were fired on from the upper windows. Freeze was shot through the heart and died in ten minutes.

A Parade of Knights.

RICHMOND Va., Oct. 11.—To-day was devoted by the delegates of the general assembly of Knights of Labor to the enjoyment of the entertainment arranged in their honor by the knights of the local assembles of this city. In accordance with the mayor's proclamation, all the city offices were closed in order to permit the employes to take part in the day's festivities. Nearly all the work shops, manufactories and other establishments were also closed. Early this morning white and colored knights were seen everywhere, dressed in holiday attire, wearing badges and insignia of their order. The delegates to the general assembly were to assemble at 8 o'clock at Armory hall, but it was long past that hour when they received word to fall in line and proceed to Broad and Fourth streets, where the procession was formed.

After 10 o'clock, when the word "March" was given, the delegates and local assemblies with headquarters west of Tenth street, marched down Broad street to Twentieth, where they were joined by the assemblies of the eastern end of the city. Then the entire body marched to Main street, to Laurel, thence to the state fair grounds at the upper end of the city. The procession was headed by a squad of police. Behind them rode on horseback Grand Marshal Lynch, white and colored aids riding on either side of him. Behind the marching men rode in carriages Mr. Powderly, members of the executive board, other leading Knights, lady delegates, and the baby delegate, the 3 weeks old daughter of District Master Workman Rogers, of Chicago.

A few colored women rode in carriages, bringing up the rear of this part of the procession. The right of line of the local Knights was held by Pioneer assembly 3,572, of Richmond, composed of colored Knights headed by a colored band. Then came white assemblies again, and bringing up the rear were colored assemblies. The streets along the route were lined with spectators. The eastern end of the city especially was thronged, the entire colored population seeming to have turned out to witness the parade. Very few of the white members of the local assemblies responded to the order of the master workman to participate in the parade. It is reported that a fine of two dollars will be imposed upon each contrary member.

A Gulf Hurricane.

NEW ORLEANS, October 12.—The wind was blowing a gale here last night. Dispatches from towns on the Mississippi coast report a gale prevailing all day on the Mississippi Sound. The steamer Chalmette, Captain Byrne, from New York, which arrived yesterday, reported that she came by the inside route along the Florida coast and encountered heavy easterly gales, with heavy rain. From Tortugas to Port Eads heavy gales were experienced with high irregular seas. On Sunday, October 10, she encountered several hurricanes lasting several hours and backing from east to north, thence howling to the south. The sea ran mountain high, continually flooding the vessel's decks, and also her state rooms fore and aft.

Lake Pontchartrain was filled with water from the gulf, and a gale yesterday from the same direction caused an increase of the lake tide, the water overflowing the marshes in the rear of the city and filling the canals bank full. A break in the old basin levee on Broad street was reported at midnight. The velocity of the wind was thirty-six to forty miles an hour and still increasing.

A dispatch from the Washington signal service office says: The storm center yesterday morning south of Pensacola has moved slightly to the southwest and is now central south of Louisiana. High northwest winds are reported from the coasts of Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana. Severe northeast gales are reported for to-night off the cost of Texas

A Wedding on the Lawn.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 12.—Wooten, the beautiful country residence of George W. Childs, was the scene of unusual festivities this afternoon, the occasion being the marriage of Mr. Childs' niece, Miss Mary Bonvier Peterson, to Mr. Robert H. McCartney, a young lawyer of Newark, N. J. There were present about 500 guests, who had come from the city in a special train. Many friends of the couple came from Baltimore, Washington, New York, Newark and Boston to witness the ceremonies. The house was elaborately decorated, and the exceptionally mild weather which prevailed permitted the marriage ceremony to be performed on the lawn in an autumn bower of evergreens, laurels, and other plants. The bride and groom stood under a canopy of roses, attended by seven bridesmaids and five ushers. The officiating clergyman was Rev. Dr. Henry J. Monton, of St. James Protestant Episcopal church, of this city, assisted by Rev. W. H Burr. The bride was the recipient of a handsome dwelling, completely furnished, in Newark. After the nuptial banns were pronounced the entire party sat down to luncheon, and in the evening the couple left for Newark. They will spend two or three weeks in the New England States and then return to their new home in Newark.

Briefs.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., October 10.—Advices from Fordyce report a $2,000 express robbery at that place. The money is reported to have been stolen from the Southern Express Company by H. B. Miller, a telegraph operator. The robber is described as having dark hair and moustache, left arm off between elbow and wrist, and also wears an artificial leg.

NEW YORK, October 10.—Marcus Rosenfeld, the author of a number of well known variety songs, among others "Climbing Up the Golden Stairs," pleaded guilty to forging a check for $225 on the Germania bank. The prosecution was inclined to be lenient, and Rosenfeld was remanded until his antecedents be inquired into.

CHARLESTON, S. C., October 10.—The day has passed without anything to mar its perfect beauty; no shocks since yesterday morning, and no more are expected. The churches to-day were crowded with worshipers, and the sermons generally touched upon the lessons of the recent calamity.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Oct. 10.—The trial of Professor Ira G. Strunk, charged with killing Charles V. Hoover in New Albany, Ind., about three months ago, ended last night. A verdict of "not guilty" was rendered. Hoover was a prominent druggist, and the evidence went to show that the shooting was only the result of his intimacy with Strunk's wife. Strunk met Hoover and shot him down on sight.

The Strike at Chicago.

CHICAGO, October 11.—Shortly before 9 o'clock fifty of the beef killers, employed in the Fowler packing house, stopped work and joined the main body of the strikers. Shortly afterwards the men employed to load the freight cars by the Armour house also stopped work, and the pressure from the strikers is so great that the fear is entertained that the strike will involve all the men employed about the yards, and occasion an entire cessation of work in all the houses.

ADDITIONAL LOCAL NEWS.

Lewistown and Its Chemical Engine.

The peaceful burg of Lewistown is somewhat agitated at present over the action of its Town Council in regard to the purchase of a chemical engine. In a special meeting of Council on Thursday evening, September 30, a majority of the members signed in favor of purchasing such an engine for the use of the borough but at an adjourned meeting the next evening some of the original signers struck off their names from the contract, and thus annulled it. The representative of the firm with which the contract had been arranged, "acting upon the conviction that a sale is a sale," threatens to bring suit for the purchase money. It is affirmed by those in favor of the project that the East ward of the town stands in great need of such an engine in the absence of a good water supply, and much dissatisfaction is manifest among the citizens in consequence of the action of Council in the matter.

—The King of Showmen, Adam Forepaugh, and his gigantic amusement enterprise arrived at an early hour this morning by his own special trains. The reputation of this great caterer of public amusement is so fully established that but little comment is required. The public have learned to know that every promise made by Adam Forepaugh is made to be faithfully fulfilled, not to be broken. In the last decade the name of Forepaugh has grown to be a ruling power which all competitors fear this season. "The King" has added new laurels to his fame and the proclamation that his "all feature show" should eclipse all previous efforts has been verified to the letter. No stronger proof of a meritorious entertainment can be asked for than the comments of the leading press wherever Forepaugh has pitched his "City of tents" this season. The Pittsburg Dispatch says "Forepaugh always has the best. This season it is "better than ever." The Pittsburg Leader says: "Forepaugh has outdone himself this season and has the best show ever in Pittsburg." The Pittsburg Times says: "Adam Forepaugh, Jr., introduces the marvelous Blondin horse and his more wonderful herd of educated elephants at each entertainment which is alone worth the price of admission."

—A letter has just been received from Mr. James Montgomery, of Wausau, Wisconsin, who was formerly the skillful bookkeeper for Mr. Fearon Mann, and now has a hardware store of his own. He writes under date October 9, as follows: "Just time to make the mail, just became the happy father of twins—both boys, and hurrahing loudly for Gen. Beaver. Twins and mother doing well. Break the news gently to all the young men and especially the young ladies, and tell James Harris to send me a draft for $50 and I will acknowledge receipt."

—When we talk about establishing new iron works we can urge with some show of truth that capital from a distance must help to do it. It is beyond the ability of our citizens to furnish the hundreds of thousands of money required for such investments. But it is foolish for anyone to say that Bellefonte cannot furnish the $25,000 necessary to rebuild the glass works. It can be done with ease. Let some enterprising, public-spirited individual put his shoulder to the wheel and it will be as easy as to fall off of a log.

—Wm. B. Rankin, the agent of the Equitable Life Insurance Society, N. Y., to-day (11th inst.) handed the widow of the late Col. D. G. Bush a check for eleven thousand, seven hundred and thirty-three dollars and three cents ($11,733.03), being the amount of insurance on Mr. Bush's life, with accumulations. Death proofs in this case were forwarded Oct. 2d. No comment is necessary, as the Equitable merely paid this loss with the same promptness and dispatch with which they pay all their losses. oll1wd1tw

Getting a Drink.

From the St. Paul Globe.

"I was up in Dakota myself," remarked a passenger, "and I saw how easily some of these tramps make a living, for I suppose they call it a living when they get a drink of whisky and something to eat thrown in. The tramps were thick and had been for some time. They would hang around a small town and bother the people almost to death. It is really dangerous to have so many of these vagabonds about. But they won't work, they tell me, and the result is that it is pretty difficult to get rid of them.

"Up in a little town—the name I can't recall—I happened to be waiting from one train until another. There was nothing to do, so I went into a saloon to get some beer. While there drinking three of these tramps came in and ordered three drinks of whisky.

"'Have you got any stuff?" said the saloon keeper.

"'Course," replied one of the thirsty trio, 'we's playing the "crow" act, we is."

"'Where?" asked the man behind the bar.

"The spokesman named the farm at which he was employed, showed an order, and the three men got their drinks and departed. When they went out I asked what was meant by the 'crow act,' when he told me that some of the farmers got the tramps to take the part of a scarecrow in the wheat fields and keep the birds away. The tramps took turns, he said in standing up on a platform high above the wheat and occasionally would throw a rock at a flock of birds. As there was no work about it the tramps took to it. It paid them very little, usually two or three drinks and a bite to eat, but even this they considered living, as long as they did not have to work for it."

Mrs. Fremont in her sketch of the life of her father—Senator Benton—tells the following of the French Bishop at St. Louis at the time of the purchase of Louisiana. It was a point of honor among the older French not to learn English, but the Bishop needed to acquire fluent English for all uses, and for use from the pulpit especially. To force himself into familiar practice, the Bishop secluded himself for a while with the family of an American farmer, where he would hear no French. Soon he had gained enough to announce a sermon in English. Senator Benton was present, and his feelings can be imagined when the polished and refined Bishop said: "My friends, I am right down glad to see such a smart chance of folks here to-day."

SPECIAL MENTION.

Over Many a League

Spreads the miasma, or poisonous vapor, that begets malarial and typhus fever. Wherever there is stagnant water in which vegetation, or refuse of any kind decays, there, as surely as the sun rises, are generated the seeds of fever and ague, dumb ague, and other endemic maladies of the malarial type. For the effects of this envenomed air, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters furnishes an antidote, and prevents both the contraction and recurrence of such maladies. Even along the line of excavation for the Lesseps Panama Canal, where malarial diseases are not only virulent but deadly, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters has demonstrated its incomparable protective qualities. Not only for febrile complaints, but also for disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels, for rheumatism and inactivity of the kidneys and bladder, it is very effective. It counteracts the effects of fatigue, damp and exposure.

Geneva Wafers.

Well whisk two eggs; put them into a basin and stir to them three ounces butter, which must be beaten to a cream; add three ounces flour and sifted sugar gradully, and then mix all well together. Butter a baking-sheet, and drop on it a teaspoonful of the mixture at a time, leaving a space between each. Bake in a cool oven; watch the pieces of paste, and when half done roll them up like wafers and put in a small wedge of bread or piece of wood to keep them in shape; place them in the oven again until crisp. Before serving remove the bread, put a spoonful of preserve in the widest end, and fill up with whipped cream.

Can't Make Anything Like It.

I have been practicing medicine for twenty years, and have never been able to put up a vegetable compound that would, like Simmons Liver Regulator, promptly and effectively move the liver to action and at the same time aid (instead of weakening) the digestive and assimilative powers of the system. No other remedy within my knowledge can fill its place.

Lines from Loveville.

LOVEVILLE, Oct. 11.

It has been some time since our last "Lines from Loveville" were in print. This was because your correspondent was away from home a large part of the time. We will endeavor, during the coming winter, to give, each week, the happenings of our town and vicinity, and we hope that they will meet with the approbation of our people.

Amos Clemson and wife, of Rock Springs, this county, spent Sunday in Loveville.

The public schools of Half Moon township will commence Monday, October 18. The teachers are: Ira Burkert, Upper Town school; H. Elder, Lower Town school; Miss Hartswick, Centennial; Harry Thompson, Tow Hill; W. F. Beck, Loveville; H. E. Beck, Centre Line.

There will be a Republican political meeting at Loveville Friday, the 19th, at 7:30 p. m. Speakers will be from Bellefonte and are expected to give our people good advice on political topics.

Mrs. John Wilson, of near Loveville, is quite ill.

Our farmers are busy bringings their cattle off the Allegheny mountain. They have been very successful.

This being Autumn, our valley presents a fine appearance, the tinted foliage adding to the effect. Looking due north from Loveville, Muncy ridge encircles it in the form of a rainbow, and at this season of the year it has the bright colors of that much-admired object. No traveler can look upon it without admiration.

The Loveville Literary Society will meet in the Loveville school house, on Friday evening, October 22, for the purpose of reorganizing for the coming winter.

A singing class is to be organized at Centre Line, in the near future and will be under the instruction of Prof. J. A. Weaver. We hope that all the arrangements will be completed successfully.

On last Friday and Saturday evening I had the pleasure of attending a musical concert, given under the direction of Prof. J. A. Weaver, near Centre Line, and it was a grand success. The principal singer was Miss Luella Musser, of State College, who was once a resident of Loveville. She has been for two years under the instruction of Prof. Weaver and has been, during the summer, traveling in various parts of the State and has come in competition with the best musical culture.

Last week she sung in Clearfield county against a Philadelphia lady, and we hear that Miss Musser was much superior. She is quite young and has a beautiful rich voice which all of us are proud of. She will sing at Rock Spring, this county, Nov. 6, in the evening.

CLAY.

Recollections of a Meeting of Presbytery.

Having been in attendance at a meeting of Presbytery of Huntingdon, on the 5th, 6th and 7th insts, at Arch Spring church in Sinking Valley, Blair County, Pa., I would like to tell you a little in reference to the grand church the people of that valley and Canoe Valley together have erected. It is a large building built of brick and stone, the main building, commodious basement and all the other parts finely furnished and carpeted throughout in the best style. They also have an excellent organ and a well-drilled choir to render the music.

The people of these valleys are generous, kind and industrious and generally in good circumstances. The large attendance at Presbytery were well entertained by the generous people there. In the basement of the church were four tables. Two of them extended the entire length of the room and the others were not quite so long. The tables were laden with everything in the eatable line that I could mention and equalled any picnic or festival tables I ever saw.

Here in this great dining room we enjoyed dinner and supper, and after the evening service the members took us to their homes. Some took only one, while others took two, three or as high as seven, in accordance with their ability and their room for accommodating them. In the morning they brought them back again, unless, perchance, they desired to leave for their homes or business places, in which case they were conducted to the station. Every arriving train was met by conveyances which carried such as came to the Presbytery. From beginning to end it was a successful affair, well conducted by the Rev. I. I. Cole, the present minister, who is an excellent gentleman.

I wish to tender my hearty thanks to Mr. Joel Louder and family for the kind hospitality shown me and which was so much enjoyed while in their pleasant home. The father is a genial, whole souled gentleman and the son, David, is imitating him closely in all excellent qualities. May the blessing of God go with them.

ANON.

Tribute of Respect.

WHEREAS, in the wisdom and providence of God, death has again crossed our threshold, and removed from our Sabbath-school Mr. J. Howard Harter, in whom we recognized a beloved, affectionate and consistent member, a kind and loving husband and father and faithful friend; be it therefore

Resolved, That we bow in humble submission to the will of that Supreme and over ruling Providence that dictates and controls the destinies of his people so as to subserve His divine purpose and promote their spiritual good.

Resolved, That we tender to the bereaved family and in a special manner to the distressed and sorrowing widow the most cordial and tender sympathy of the Georges Valley Lutheran Sabbath-school.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family with the assurance of our fraternal sympathy, confident that He who doeth all things well will comfort and console them in their hour of affliction, realizing that He is abundantly able and willing to supply their spiritual and temporal needs.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the county papers for publication.

DIED.—Mrs. Carrie Holter, wife of J. B. Holter, on last Thursday evening, interment on Saturday at 2 o'clock. Mrs. Holter was a member of the Evangelical church and was held in high esteem by the entire community. She had been ill for about two months. As the days passed she became weaker and weaker until death came to her relief. Rev. W. W. Gross conducted the funeral services.

We do not encourage any violation of the law—far from it—but merely give the cause of the law being violated. The removal of the fish basket does not do any good so far as we can see, for they are put right in again, and so the expense might as well be avoided. We have no interest either one way or the other, only disparaging the way it is done, etc.

Rev. John Baker was in town on Saturday. He also attended the funeral of Mrs. Holter.

The Evangelical Association commenced a protracted meeting at Fairview church. We have not heard how the prospects are, but they generally have very good meetings there.

School will commence on Monday, October 18, in the borough, and in Howard township on the 25th of the same month.

ALERT.

—Five or six of the employes at the glass works have already secured work in other factories, and will go at once. All the factories in the country being in operation at present, renders it easier for them to get work now. All of them say that they will return here when the works are rebuilt. We must say that they are a good class of citizens and we hope they will come back again.

—"Nothing venture nothing have." If you don't venture a few thousand dollars in new glass works and other similar enterprises you will have nothing and Bellefonte will sink into insignificance. Besides it is not much of a venture; five years of experience has proved that.

ANOTHER earthquake was felt in the Blizzard office to-day—or, if not an earthquake, we experienced a terrible shock. A man came in and deliberately paid an account which had been standing two years.—Oil City Blizzard. Oh, oh; we have been having shocks of that kind every day for a long while past. The more shocking our experience is in that respect the better we are pleased.

A PLOT to destroy the city of Vienna, the capital of Austria, has just been discovered. Anarchists are the guilty ones. Again we say, let Anarchists be given the position in which they want the whole world placed. Withdraw from them the protection of law. Let every man's hand be against them. That will make them renounce their doctrines and claim protection of law.

IF Lord Randolph Churchill succeeds in persuading Bismarck to join England against Russia, it will be a great feather in his cap and very comfortable for England. But there are two reasons for doubting his success. First, Bismarck is too old a fox to be used as a catspaw for Churchill's chestnuts; next he has ranged himself with Russia on the side of absolutism, already.

THE Williamsport Gazette and Bulletin is disgusted because the country papers give so much fulsome flattery to city dailies whenever they reduce in price or make other change of note. If the Gazette and Bulletin will read the DAILY NEWS' comments on the recent reduction in price of a certain Philadelphia daily it will not find much fulsome flattery in it.

October Days.

But, after all, there is nothing, in all the rolling year, quite so stimulating, or so fine, as these brilliant and crisp October days. They are so marked as to be a distinctive feature of our American climate, with their cheery accompaniment of the painted woods—flaming trees, that glow like Josheph's coat of many colors. Nothing can be finer than our genial and brilliant October mornings especially. They have a glow and glory of their own, in which the eastern sides of the reddening ranges shine replendent in the beams of the morning sun, and the world awakes to the life and joy of a fresh, new day. Nor are the afternoon lights and shadows less beautiful—though they are full of different discourse. And it all depends upon one's mood whether he feels like singing the pensive October song—

> Tears, idle tears, I know not what they mean—

or that other, gladder more uplifting one, with its flying banners and its proud music of the bugle—

> The splendor falls on castle walls
> And snowy summits old in story:
> The long light shakes across the lake,
> And the wild cataract leaps in glory.

Both befit our splendid mid-autumn time—opposite as they are in sentiment and spirit. Perhaps, after all, more than either tone is heard (or it is felt?) that other inward speech, "a folded voice," breathing out of all the passing glory something prophetic of greater things to be:

> and all the rich to come
> Reels, as the golden autumn woodland reels
> Athwart the smoke of burning weeds.

No Competition Here.

The subscribers to the BELLEFONTE REPUBLICAN who pay up all arrearages and one full year in advance, get not only the best local newspaper in the county, but also, the Philadelphia Press one year free. Last week these two papers contained eighty-five columns of interesting reading; over one thousand eight hundred and seventy (1870) inches—as much as a good sized book—and the entire cost of all this to our subscribers was a little less than four cents. This is the greatest amount of reading for so little money ever offered to the people of Centre county. New subscribers who pay two dollars in advance, for the year, get the benefit of this unparalleled offer. For their two dollars they get one hundred and four papers, containing one hundred thousand inches of solid reading matter, without one line of advertising. And besides, they get many columns of interesting advertisements showing them where they can buy and buy cheap and good. In this we have no competition. No other paper in the county can make this offer. No other paper in this county can give the Press free. Hundreds have taken advantage of it, and hundreds more will. It is a "soft snap" and he who fails to "catch on" is not wise. An interesting campaign is at hand and the fullest reports from all over the State can be had here. The long winter evenings are at hand, and we offer intellectual food of unparalleled sweetness and great abundance—science, religion, fiction, politics, the world of fashion, the home, the farm, love, intrigue, war.

THE base ball season is at its close and the standing of the various clubs have been settled. In both the leading associations Western clubs hold first and second place, the highest rank of an Eastern club in each being third place. The season has been the most successful ever known in base ball, and the popularity of the game shows no signs of a decline. Base ball has surpassed the turf in popularity in this country, and unlike the latter, it is entirely independent of betting, pool-selling or any other sort of gambling for its support.

THE New York Times and the Sun of that city are having an entertaining discussion about a river located in Alaska. It is a river which the Sun asserts was discovered one hundred years ago. But the Times claims that it was discovered only recently and gives it the name Jones river in honor of the proprietor of the Times, who furnished part of the capital to the expedition that made the so-called discovery. The Sun has the better of the discussion, having republished numerous reliable maps with "Jones" river plainly outlined thereon.

CHAIRMAN HENSEL is vehemently denying that he sent out paid emissaries to bribe the Knights of Labor to vote the Democratic ticket and he clinches his denial by using that well known and powerful Democratic argument "It is an unmitigated lie!" The Lancaster boy is in a terrible state of effervesence since it has become apparent to him that Beaver's majority is likely to run up to one hundred thousand! If he can keep it below eighty thousand he will be happy.

THE Chicago Anarchists have been sentenced to be hung December 3, with the exception of Neebe, who is given fifteen years' imprisonment in the penitentiary. Their punishment is perhaps, the most impressive warning to the vicious and malcontent ever given by justice to this country.

EVEN William R. Morrison has given up his free trade talk until he returns to Congress. He is now talking against prohibition.

Healthy Occupations.

The first place among healthy occupations is held by ministers of religion, the death rate of this class being 555. Next we have gardeners and nurserymen, who stand 599; farmers and graziers, 631; agricultural laborers, 801; schoolmasters, 718; the other trades which follow closely on these being grocers, coal merchants, paper manufacturers, lace and hosiery manufacturers, wheelwrights, ship builders and shipwrights and coal miners. The figure of mortality for all these trades is under 775. On the other side, that of the unhealthy occupations, the first place is held by the trades which are concerned in the manufacture and distribution of intoxicating drink, which, as is well known, entail many temptations to use it to excess. The list of unhealthy occupations is headed by the class of inn and hotel servants, whose figure amounts up 2,205, being nearly double that of the medical profession. The highest places next to them are held by the general laborers in London and costermongers, hawkers and street peddlers, the former class with 2,020, and the latter with 1,879. It is probable that both are largely made up of broken men, the wrecks of other callings. Innkeepers, publicans, spirit, wine and beer dealers follow with a figure of 1,521 and brewers with 1,361. In support of the belief that these high rates of mortality are chiefly due to alcoholic excess, Dr. Ogle has compared with them the mortality assigned to diseases of the liver, the organ through which such excess chiefly declares itself, and has obtained results which are in harmony with those of the trade returns. Next to the trades concerned with alcohol, the highest rates are furnished by occupations which involve the breathing of dust—other than coal dust—and especially of a sharp and gritty character, or largely composed of mineral matter; next, those in which there is exposure to lead poisoning, as with plumbers, painters and filemakers. The earthenware manufacturers, who are much exposed to mineral dust, have a figure of 1,742; filemakers, who work upon a leaden cushion, reach 1,667, and plumbers and painters, who are also exposed to lead, reach 1,202.

Our Alaskan Possessions.

The most recent territorial acquisition of the United States is developing unexpected wealth, both of sea and land, under researches of exploring parties. When Alaska was purchased for $7,500,000 it was supposed the territory was a nearly worthless region of ice and rock and that the money might have been expended to better purposes. But Alaska possesses attractions. Its coast waters are the home of swarms of seal, and the government receives $350,000 annually from an eastern company for the monopoly of catching them. This is only about one-half what the privilege is worth, but it is 5 per cent. on the purchase price of the territory. And seals are not the only interesting feature in Alaska. It has a glacier that would put those of Switzerland to shame. It extends from Mount St. Elias to the coast, and even far out into the sea, having a breast fifty miles wide, covering an area half as large as Rhode Island, and possessing a thickness of 1,000 feet. It was hardly to have been expected that Alaska would exhibit such things as a "beautiful prairie with heavy grass and wild pea vines, interspersed with strawberry patches loaded with fruit" in September, but this is one of the pictures presented in Schwatka's recent explorations. Then there are vast rivers in Alaska—the Yukon, larger than the Ohio, flowing north into the Arctic ocean, and one or two others flowing into the Pacific. Some day Alaska will be a favorite summer resort. It is a long distance off at present, it is true, but there are already so many tourists visiting it in the summer that steamers make weekly trips from Portland up the coast, to accommodate the travel—and it is certain the number of Alaska travelers will increase as the wonders of the country become known.

From Bride to Wife in a Week.

Caller—"I am glad to see you looking so well and happy. Your wedding tour was not of very long duration, I notice. Very sensible, very sensible."

Bride—"My husband was very willing to prolong the tour, but I knew that his presence was required at his place of business."

Caller—"Very few brides are so considerate as that."

Bride—"Oh, I ceased to be a bride very early. In less than a week I became a wife."

Caller—"I am afraid I do not understand you."

Bride—"Why, we had not been married a week before he asked me to sew on a button."

Medical.

THE WONDER

Is becoming universal as to how such an immense sale could be created in Lowell for HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA. But, my friend, if you could stand behind our counter a week and hear what those say who are using it, the reason would appear as clear as the noon-day sun. The real curative power of HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA demonstrates itself in every case where our directions are faithfully regarded. We would that we might get before the people a fractional part of the confidence that is expressed to us every day in this medicine by those who have carefully noted (without prejudice) its effects upon the blood and through that upon the whole system, stimulating all the functions of the body to perform the duties nature requires of them. Try a bottle and satisfy yourself.

Cold Hands and Feet.

LOWELL, Feb. 3, 1879.

MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & Co.: Gentlemen—About one year ago my daughter commenced taking your Sarsaparilla. At that time she had very little appetite; could take no long walks, and her face was badly broken out with a humor. She was low-spirited; troubled with cold hands and feet; her blood seemed to be poor, and she was in a condition which caused us great anxiety. After taking one bottle of your Sarsaparilla she began to improve; and she now has a good appetite and can take much longer walks. Her humor is nothing compared with what it was one year ago. She is in better spirits, is not troubled with cold hands and feet as previously. And I attribute this improvement in her condition largely to your Sarsaparilla. She has taken six bottles, and intends to continue its use. I was inclined to oppose the trial of it at first. I now have great faith in it as a blood purifier. Very truly yours,

A. L. HINCKLEY,
No. 264 Broadway, Lowell, Mass.

Fatal Explosion.

CHICAGO, Ill, October 5—A special to the Inter Ocean from St Louis says the steamer La Mascotte exploded her boiler at noon to-day, killing a large number of people. She was a passenger boat running between St. Louis and cape Girardeau. The disaster occurred near the latter place. The Daily News' Cairo, Ill., special says the disaster occurred at Apple Creek, six miles below Grand Towerhand, and after the explosion the steamer was burned. She was less than ninety days old and was valued at $50,000. She was the property of Durlann & Peakins, of Evensville, Ind.

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo, October 6.—Further particulars of the explosion on the steamer La Mascotte, which blew up near Cape Girardeau yesterday, show that besides the ten persons already known to have lost their lives, there were several drowned whose bodies are not yet recovered. Fifteen persons seriously injured have been brought to this city. At the Sisters of Mercy hospital are the second mate, a carpenter and a scrub boy who are severely burned about the hands and body. The carpenter, D. S. Davidson, was also burned internally. There are also ten deck hands at the hospital who are most horribly scalded, and some of them will not recover.

The Knights at Richmond.

RICHMOND, Va, October 6.—"We have made little progress to-day," said Mr. Powderly to a press representative immediately at the close of the morning session. "We are yet on secret work and have not decided the contests. Nothing can be made public at this time." From other sources it is learned that, as an anticipated in an earlier dispatch to-day, the session was exceedingly lively at times acrimonious—and that the condition of the work of organization is the same as when the convention met at 9 o'clock. Many speeches were made and much earnestness shown by delegates to reorganize all of the representatives present, especially the trio from Brooklyn. The effort of district 49 to shut out Brooklyn and hold the general representation down to the strict letter of the law were characterized as "rough-shod work" and repulsed by a number of the more conservative men. It is very probable that all of this afternoon's session, and possibly a portion of to-morrow's session will be consumed in the further discussion of the report to the committee on credentials.

The afternoon session of the Knights lasted until 6 p. m. Mr. Powderly said there was nothing to give to the press. The convention is still considering the credential committee's report and the failure to take action on the same is delaying the work of the body.

Robbers in a Church.

NOTRE DAME, Ind., October 7.—Early yesterday morning thieves broke into the church of the University of Notre Dame and stole two crowns from the shrine of the Blessed Virgin. The larger was a magnificent piece of artistic metal work presented to the University by thirty ladies, among whom was Mrs. General Sherman. Five Parisian workmen were constantly employed during three months in making the crown, and twelve others for two weeks. It contained 29½ pounds of pure silver and nearly two pounds of pure gold. Sixty-four turquoises and sixty-six other precious stones, and sixteen miniature paintings on porcelain decorated the embossed and compactly hammered work. The smaller crown was an exquisite piece of workmanship and a gift to Notre Dame from the Empress Eugenie. It was awarded the prize for jewelry work at the Paris Exposition of 1867.

The thieves broke the crowns into pieces and ran away with their booty. They were followed, and the one who carried the spoils is now in jail at the neighboring city of South Bend. The crowns are ruined beyond repair and are a great loss from an artistic point of view.

Death of a Veteran Railroader.

WASHINGTON October 6—Joseph K. Sharp, of the Baltimore and Potomac Railroad, died in this city this morning. Mr. Sharp was a veteran in the railroad business and his term of service dates back about forty years. He began railroading when about 20 years old, on the old Northern Central, then known as the Baltimore and Susquehanna. He worked in every capacity on the Northern Central, from a brakeman on a freight train to Superintendent of the road. About the time when the Baltimore and Potomac road was established he came here under Superintendent Dubarry and at the time of his death he held the position of assistant train master of the road. At one time he held the position of Chief of Police at York, Pa., where he orginally lived.

Their Sanity.

WASHINGTON, D. C., October 6.—James T. Williams, who was arrested at the white house in March, 1885, while insisting on the president paying him $500,000 on a claim against the government, and who was sent to the insane asylum, was to-day brought into the District court on a writ of habeas corpus and released. The court decided that no person can be restrained of his liberty as an insane person unless the question had been passed upon by a jury. There are but about twenty of the twelve hundred patients in the government insane asylum whose sanity has been passed upon by a jury de lunatic inquirndo.

A Thrilling Scene.

NEW YORK, October 7.—A fire broke out early this morning in the four-story factory building, Nos. 63 to 67 Bayard street. It is David Block's old tinware factory, and has been on fire a number of times before. Since the tinware factory has been removed, tailors, cloak manufacturers and quilt makers have taken possession of the building, eight different firms having shops in it, three of the cloak manufacturers being Samuel Paul, Joseph Weiner and Nathan Fried, on the fourth floor.

Between fifty and seventy men, women and children were at work when the fire occurred. Samuel Paul's employees escaped by the east stairway, which was unobstructed, to the street. The employees of the other establishments couldn't escape by the west stairway, their path being blocked by the flames and dense smoke, to face which meant death. The fire was below them in Hollender's quilt factory.

The frightened employees then made for the roof of the building. The last reached the flat roof with clothes afire and half-smothered. Already the just deserted rooms were on fire and to stay on the roof was to perish, as the flames were breaking through the scuttle. The adjoining factory was a two-story house with a peaked roof. To leap to it was perilous, but to remain was certain death. The employees shrieked in despair, and a large crowd gathered in the street below.

With shrieks of terror they were echoed in a loud wail from the street, men and women flung themselves off. Minnie Rogansky, a young woman living at 64 Bayard street, fell to the street on her head and was mortally hurt, her skull being crushed in. She was removed to the hospital. A little boy who was clinging to the coping of the peak roofed house was rescued by Paul J. Shappell, an old volunteer fireman, with the aid of some of the citizens and the police. The police went up on the roof of a tall tenement at No. 71 and threw a rope down to factory employes still left on the roof of the burning building and they were rescued one after the other. Others were taken into windows from the peak-roofed house. A man named Hyman Roberts hurt his arm badly. All this took but a few minutes, and then the police and firemen put up ladders. All this time the roof of the factory was on fire but the firemen were soon masters of the situation. A close search of burned rooms soon showed nobody had been burned to death. Loss on building and contents will foot up $20,000.

Chicago Anarchists Sentenced to Death.

CHICAGO, Oct. 7.—There was a great deal of suppressed excitement about the Criminal Court building this morning in anticipation of Judge Gary's decision in the Anarchist cases. Shortly after 10 o'clock the Judge commenced the reading of his decision. He started in on a review of the law points in the case and went into the minutest details, the prisoners listening to what the Judge was saying with the strictest attention, but were evidently nervous.

Judge Gary concluded by overruling the motion for a new trial in the cases of the eight Anarchists charged with the Haymarket massacre, and confirmed the verdict of the jury, that Spies, Parsons, Fielden, Schwab, Engel, Fisher and Lingg should be hanged and Neebe should suffer imprisonment for 14 years in the State penitentiary. The Court did not conclude his decision until 12 30 o'clock and owing to the intercession of the counsel for the prisoners he deferred passing sentence upon them until 2 o'clock this afternoon, at which time sentence was pronounced in accordance with the verdict.

When the court opened this afternoon Spies, Fisher and Lingg each in turn addressed the Court. Their language was of a highly incendiary character. Without passing sentence court adjourned until to-morrow.

Bulgaria and Russia.

ST. PETERSBURG, October 7.—The newspapers here publish a telegram from Giurgevo, Roumania, dated last Sunday, which says that the movement in favor of Russia, which started in the Bulgarian army under the leadership of the garrison at Shumla, is now in full progress. The despatch says the movement has spread rapidly, and that the adhesion of the garrisons at Rustchuk, Widdin, Plevna, and Slivno appears to be unquestionable. The telegram goes on to say that on Saturday last the Shumla garrison telegraphed to the Bulgarian Minister of War at Sofia that they were convinced that the present state of political anarchy was injuring the rights and interests of the people and the country; that they desired the release of all the originators of the coup d' etat as demanded by Russia, and that they wished General Kaulbars's note containing the Czar's demands to be considered by the Bulgarian Government in order to avoid a breach between two sister nations. "Otherwise," the message concluded, "the garrison reserve the right to act on their own judgment." This was signed by Commanders Khozaroff, Dikoff and Ludskatoff.

No Strike in the Lehigh Region.

HAZLETON, October 6.—The cloud of uncertainty regarding the strike of miners and laborers that has hung over the whole of the Lehigh region for some days past was entirely dispelled when the men in every colliery in the region went to work as usual at 1 o'clock this afternoon. Twelve o'clock noon was the hour at which it had been given out the strike would take place but when that hour arrived there was not the slightest evidence to be discovered anywhere that such a thing as a strike had ever been thought of by the workingmen of the district. Notices were posted at various collieries last evening stating that as the price of coal had advanced to $4 23¾ at New York and tidal points for the month of October the men's wages would be advanced two per cent. This advance seems to give general satisfaction.

The Knights of Labor.

RICHMOND, Va., October 8.—At the afternoon session of the Knights of Labor convention to-day Mr. Powderly's address was finally read and the report of the committee appointed to investigate the case of the Home Club of New York, was made and adopted. With regard to the nature of that report Mr. Powderly declined to furnish any information. Committees were appointed upon law appeals and grievances and upon the state of the order, and a special committee upon the distribution of resolutions. A resolution was adopted providing for the appointing of a special committee to take into consideration those parts of Mr. Powderly's address which relate to the education of their training of youth for the performance of their duties as citizens. A resolution was also adopted authorizing the appointment of a special committee of five to prepare and send a telegram to some proper persons in Providence, R. I., with regard to the limitations of the right of suffrage in that State. The committee drafted and sent the following communication to Charles E. Gorman, Chairman of the Equal Rights Democratic Association, Providence, R. I.:

"The order of the Knights of Labor, in General Assembly, convened at Richmond, Va., endorse the efforts in behalf of the elimination of unjust discrimination from the constitution of your State, and pledge its moral support to you until success is achieved."

The committee was also directed to send a similar telegram to the District of Columbia, in view of the disfranchised condition of its inhabitants. This committee was appointed in accordance with a resolution adopted at the Cleveland assembly. Mr. Powderly was shown a newspaper containing a telegram from Montreal, to the effect that delegates are about to be sent here from Canada to consult with him as to the possibility and expediency of so changing the constitution of the Knights of Labor as to render it unobjectionable to the Roman Catholic church. Mr. Powderly said that he had received no information with regard to it. He also denied the truth of statements published this morning, to the effect that he called last evening upon Bishop Keans, of this city, for the purpose of consulting him with reference to the affars of the order, and with reference to the position taken by the Knights of Labor upon the color question. He said that he had called socially upon the Bishop, as he had been accustomed to call upon the clergy of any city in which he happened to be, but that he had no conversation with him concerning the Knights of Labor or the color question. Now that it is known exactly who are qualified delegates, it is found that the total number entitled to seats in the convention is 755. The number present is 710.

A Big Strike.

CHICAGO, October 8.—The great strike of the employes of the Chicago packing houses against the proposition to return to the ten hour working day, began this morning. The packing house owners had put up printed notices, notifying their men that, beginning next Monday, the men would be expected to work ten hours instead of eight hours a day. This morning a committee of the 1,500 employes of the Chicago Packing and Provision company waited on the foreman of the works and demanded that the notices be taken down. The demand was refused and the regiment of workingmen at once left the building and were soon joined by the 800 men employed in the Silberhorn works.

Shortly before 2 o'clock, evidently by preconcerted action, all the men employed by the following stock yard shipping firms refused to work and joined the strikers: Armour & Co., John Morrell, J. T. Hackey & Co., John Cudahy, International Provision company and the Anglo-American Packing company. There are between 6,000 and 7,000 of them, making about 8,000 in all who struck during the day. Some of Morrell's men after going out decided to return to work. The strikers at once invaded the place to compel them to quit and employed violence, which, for the time, took on dimensions of a serious riot.

Affairs became more quiet after the arrival of the police. It was found that some of the Morrell employes were injured by the attack made upon them, but none seriously. The 300 Pinkerton men are guarding the houses to-night. The representatives of the Silberhorn packing house declare that New York and other eastern buyers were sending their orders to Kansas City, which necessitated the change of the same house here. Armour & Co. posted a notice to-night notifying their men to come and receive their pay to-morrow. It is deemed probable that the houses all contemplate keeping closed down for a short time at least.

Briefs.

PHILADELPHIA, October 7.—The Farmers Club dined this evening at the summer residence of Mr. Geo. Childs, at Wooten. Among the guests were Senator J. Donlad Cameron, Joseph Pulitzer, Frank Thomson, Robt. Garrett, George DeB. Keim, Austin Corbin and Col. Jas. Duffy.

AUGUSTA, October 6.—There was no opposition to General Gordon for governor and the democratic candidates for state offices. The Knights of Labor candidates for the legislature have created some excitement, but the regular democratic members were elected. A light vote was polled here and throughout the state, there being no issues or opposing candidates to bring out a full vote.

CLEVELAND, O., October 6.—Eighty freight brakemen of the Matoning division of the New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio railroad struck to-day for an advance of wages from $1.75 to $2 per day. Thirty more at Youngstown joined the movement. The yards are blocked with freight.

TRENTON, N. J., October 6.—The Republican State convention nominated B. Track Howey, of Warren county, for governor on the first ballot. The nomination was then made unanimous.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., October 6.—Frank Thomson, vice president of the Pennsylvania railroad company, having returned from Europe, appeared at his office to-day and resumed his duties.

WILMINGTON, Del., October 6.—William G. Gibbons, president of the Pusey & Jones company of iron ship builders, died suddenly this afternoon on the way to his office.

LONDON, October 6.—There has been further rioting between Hindoos and Momammedans at Delhi. It was necessary to call out troops to suppress the disturbances.

They Wont be Allowed to Come.

HARRISBURG, October 6.—Gov. Pattison, when asked this evening what course would be pursued in the event of any diseased cattle being sent from Chicago east through Pennsylvania, said that the cattle would be quarantined and destroyed and further shipments to the state prohibited by proclamation. It is a fact that the state has never had a case of pleuro-pneumonia from the west, the infected cattle that have gotten within its boundaries coming from the south. Secretary Edge, of the State board of agriculture, will keep a vigilant watch for the Chicago cattle.

South Carolina Criminals.

CHARLESTON, S. C., October 8.—At Edgefield to-day Wright Weldon colored, was hanged for the murder, twelve years ago, of John W. Lagrane, a well-to-do farmer. On the scaffold Weldon made a confession, charging that a white man hired him and other negroes to commit the murder. At Anderson, to-day, Joseph Davis, who murdered his wife a short time ago under atrocious circumstances, was convicted and sentenced to be hanged November 5.

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetation remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after testing its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human sufferings, I will send free of charge, to all who desires it, this reciept, in German, French or English, with full direction for preparing and using. A Small Business.

London Truth says: It is really disgraceful that taxpayers should be asked to defray the cost of all royal passages across the channel. Every time the Prince of Wales crosses to Calais or Boulogne the public have to pay £40, and even the traveling expenses of the Grand Duke of Hess and the Grand Duchess of Mecklenburg-Strehlz and other members of the family are borne by the country. All these people receive large allowances, out of which they ought to be made to defray such expense, instead of cadging on the taxpayers in this scandalous fashion, especially as the whole of these passages are mere pleasure trips. If the ordinary steamers are not good enough for the royalties, let them hire special boats at their own expenses, as they can well afford to do, thanks to the exuberant liberality of Parliament.

You see, the case was one in which a coal mine was the bone of contention, and when the clerk swore the first witness to tell "the hole truth," Judge Dunderhead solemnly rebuked him for misplaced and unseemly levity.

The Overdue Steamer.

NEW YORK, October 8.—The non-arrival of the Anchor Line steamer Ancona is now beginning to cause considerable uneasiness. It is generally believed in shipping circles that an accident has happened to her machinery which has caused her to make the Azore Islands. As there is no direct communication with these islands it will probably be some time before she is heard from.

While the above is the opinion in shipping circles, those who have friends on board are exceedingly anxious, and their anxiety is increased by the reports of stormy weather at sea, which each incoming vessel brings.

ADDITIONAL LOCAL NEWS.

—Nutting parties are in order.

—Jonathan Wolf, of Wolf's Store, is going to move to Alabama.

—Mrs. F. D. Luse died at her home in Centre Hall, on Sunday, the 3d, at 7 o'clock p, m. Her age was 41 years and 7 days.

—Tom Hull, of Aaronsburg, raised a Beaver tomato this year which measures 18 inches in circumference and weighs two pounds.

—Annie Snook, daughter of J. C. Snook, of Penn township, died on Tuesday, the 5th. She was 20 years of age. Burial last Thursday.

—It is said that the recent Lutheran conventions in this county have demonstrated that Lutheran delegates excel in pie-eaty qualities.

—We are informed that James G. Blaine will be in Altoona on the 19th inst., and will make a speech during either the afternoon or evening.

—Two parties have called on the young man who found that ring, for the purpose of examining it, but the rightful owner has not yet put in appearance.

—Five bands discoursed good music in this place Wednesday evening. They were the Farmers Mills, Millheim, Pine Hall, Pleasant Gap and Snow Shoe bands.

—The estimate made by the Watchman of the number who greeted their candidate for Governor, Wednesday night, is extreamly moderate. Five thousand! ha! ha!

—It will be good news to everybody to know that fire was put in the Glass Works furnaces on Friday night and that glass blowing will be commenced this week.

—The first step toward the erection of the Collins iron furnace will be to build a railroad switch to its proposed location. Then stone and other material can be conveyed to it more easily.

—The Democratic orators pitched into the Pennsylvania Railroad Company at a lively rate Wednesday night. Nevertheless, that company kept its trains at the station here several hours for their benefit.

—Mr. Al. Dale came home from a hunting expedition on Thursday evening. As he strode along in his hunter's garb and with a gun in hand he looked as if he might make his living by hunting, just like Nimrod of old.

—Thursday morning while two car loads of coal were being switched into the old Snow Shoe coal yard the track gave way beneath the first car and it tipped sideways in an alarming position, almost going over the bank. An old gentleman standing near narrowly escaped injury.

—Hon. W. W. Betts, a business man of Clearfield was nominated as candidate for State Senator by the Democratic conference in Tyrone Wednesday afternoon. After the Republican nomination is made we hope the Democrats wont put up any money on the result as they will be sure to lose their Betts.

—Invitations are out for the wedding of Miss Sadie Meyer, of this place, to Harry C. Baney, of Philipsburg. The affair will be solemnized on Thursday evening, October 28, at 7 o'clock, in St. John's Lutheran church, this place. Reception at half past 7 o'clock at the residence of Mr. H. H. Benner, North High street.

—We fear that the continued campaign labors of Candidate Brennan are proving injurious to his health and his friends should compell him to take a rest. The effects of the severe strain on his physical and mental system were painfully apparent to many people Wednesday evening. He is a nice man; hence our solicitude.

—On Tuesday, the 5th, the Clearfield county Republicans nominated the following ticket: For assembly, D. W. Smith, of Woodward township; for prothonotary, A. E. Woolridge, of Bradford township, for register and recorder, W. P. Mahaffey, of Bell township; for county surveyor, J. L. Vosburg, of Huston township. The Congressional conferees are Thos. H. Murray, W. C. Arnold and Herman Haupt. Senatorial conferees, Jno. W. Leonard, Jno. Trueman and Samuel L. Burge.

—It seems that Chauncey Black made the same sort of a speech in Tyrone that he did in this place. The Tyrone Herald refers to that part of it as follows: "He then unbosomed himself of a very dirty story, which brought a blush to the cheeks of every true man among his hearers and speedily caused all the ladies on the veranda to disappear within the house and beyond the reach of his voice." While Mr. Black was in Bellefonte we said that he was a gentleman. Must we reverse our verdict?

—The great Blaine meeting to be held in Pittsburg on the 20th of this month promises to be the most stupendous political demonstration ever known in this State. Political clubs will be present from all parts of the State and it seems to us the Beaver Home Club and the Nail Workers' Club of this place should make arrangements to attend. Altoona will be represented. Of course, the meeting must be held out of doors as Pittsburg does not possess a hall large enough to contain one fourth the people who will want to hear Mr. Blaine.

The Democratic Meeting.

Our friends, the Democrats, held a meeting in this place on Wednesday evening. It was an exceedingly amusing affair, and characterized by the best possible spirit throughout. There were no evidences during the day that there was to be a meeting at night. The streets were no more thronged than usual and the two candidates, Messrs. Black and Brennan, held an informal reception at their hotel, being called upon by both Democrats and Republicans.

When the 5.20 train arrived from Lock Haven the cars contained no more passengers than usual. Joe Furey, of Lock Haven, was among the passengers. When we commented on the fact of so few arrivals we were told to wait for the 6 o'clock Penns Valley train. "Our crowd comes from Penns Valley, you know." That train started from Montandon with nine coaches. It was evidently the expectation of the railroad authorities that Democrats from all along the line would come to Bellefonte. At Lemont the engine became disgusted with dragging empty cars, and four of them were left at that place. A short distance out of town a gentleman jumped on the train and passed through all the five coaches to count the passengers. He testifies that, including the two bands, there were only 80 passengers, and that they all sat on the side of the cars next the road, to show off better. But as another person informs us that there were 112 passengers on board, we will accept that statement.

A large number of passengers came in on the free train over the Buffalo Run railroad, although they were equally divided between Democrats and Republicans, a free ride and a visit to Bellefonte being the attraction. The evening was mild and lovely and very favorable.

Probably for effect, a platform was erected outside the court house in the yard and speaking was in progress, from both positions. Electric lights were suspended beneath the trees, making the enclosure look very pretty. Over the platform outside a flag was draped and the pictures of Cleveland, Hancock and Hendricks were placed in conspicuous positions. It seemed like a miscellaneous lawn party, and the young men talked to their best girls, the boys played games, and the assembly contrived to create such confussion and noise that very few could hear the voices of the speakers, which soon became hoarse under the influence of the damp night air.

D. F. Fortney, Esq., seemed to be the presiding officer outside and Ex-Governor Curtin performed the same duty inside. While Candidate Black was speaking the Court House was crowded, but as soon as his remarks were ended most of the crowd filed out. Two of the speakers made remarks about foreigners and their wives and about the peculiar methods of increasing the Democratic party in Berks county, which, consiging that a few ladies were present inside the court house, it would have been better to omit. Candidate Black was followed by Hon. B. F. Meyers, of Harrisburg, and Candidate W. J. Brennan of Allegheny. We left about 9 o'clock, but we were informed that Major Jackson L. Spangler, ex-Candidate for Congress, made a plea for the county ticket, and we suppose that Mr. Nead also made an address. None of the speakers whom we heard, except Gov. Curtin, can equal either Gen. Beaver or Col. A. Wilson Norris in the graces of oratory.

There was only one thing which rent our heart with strong and conflicting emotions and that was to see the crowd outside ruthlessly tramping upon the beautiful and luxuriant green lawn which the commissioners have cultivated so religiously this season. The tender grass which was to have been fed to the sacred cattle received serious damage.

Taken all in all, however, the affair was a pleasant one, enjoyed alike by all parties. There were no appeals to prejudices and no abusive remarks, and there was no cloud on the face of the moon as she sailed serenely in a sea of blue over the Court House.

He Was Misunderstood.

MIFFLINBURG, PA., Oct. 5th, 1886.

Editor Daily News, Dear Sir: Some one has kindly or otherwise sent me a copy of your issue of Monday, October 4, in which there is a paragraph entitled "Out of Order," the wherefore of which I am not able to see. The paragraphist calls the attention of the "reverend gentleman" who preached the ordination sermon at Centre Hall on Sunday evening, 3d inst., to the fact "that any congregation or charge in the General Synod has the undoubted right to elect and call for their pastor any regularly ordained minister who is in good standing in the church and Synod to which he belongs without being called in question for such action in an ordination sermon." Allow me to say that I am amazed at this utterance, and at utter loss to comprehend the writer's meaning, as I made no reference to, and much less called in question, the right of congregations in the matter of calling a pastor.' In speaking of character as an element of strength in the preacher, and having quoted Dr. Robinson of Brown University, that "the man is more than the preacher, tho' popular estimate too often reverses this;" and that "one of the worst symptoms of our time is a disposition to wink at clerical weaknesses if there only be raciness and entertainment in the pulpit," I did refer to the sad mistakes congregations sometimes make, when, in the exercise of their "undoubted right" to call whom they please, they have regard only to that which is brilliant in diction and attractive in elocution; and when they are forgetful that there are other qualifications essential to real success in the administration of the pastoral office. In illustration of this, I did refer in a few words to a most painful episode in the history of the Synod of Maryland, wherein a congregation having had regard only to brilliant parts, did come to great grief before the expiration of two years. I questioned no rights, nor did I impeach the character of any man, living or dead. I am sorry that "Auditor" has so greatly misunderstood me, and more sorry still that he felt it to be his duty to print his feelings. But, now that he has done so, will you not kindly give this a place in your columns, in explanation.

Very respectfully,
JNO. A. EARNEST.

Philipsburg Again.

The Republican mass meeting on Tuesday, the 5th, was a fine affair. Because of the railroad trains not making connection, Hon. John Cessna did not arrive in time to participate. Mr. Love, of Bellefonte, made a very impressive speech. The street parade was a grand success. It takes S. S. Crissman to get up a rousing "three cheers," but the "tiger" was not a success; was it Steele?

"I will fight you for one hundred dollars" is what a young man remarked after he had been pretty well choked the other day. The fight will come off soon near the Journal office. For particulars, address "Jeff," Philipsburg, Pa.

C. Munson & Son offer their entire business for sale on corner of Front and Presquesle streets. It is a grand chance for some reliable party to go into the mercantile business.

The Philipsburg bicycle club took in Clearfield fair last Thursday on their wheels.

The handsome editor of the Semi-Weekly Record, of Houtzdale, smiled on his many friends here the other day.

SOME ONE.

A Thrilling Accident.

On Thursday one of the most marvelous escapes from instant death occurred near Coburn in this county that are known to the history even of railroad accidents. Conductor Cook, who visits Bellefonte every day, threw, as is his custom, mail matter from one train to the other, as they passed each other. At this point both trains were going with more than ordinary speed, fully thirty miles an hour. The motion caused him to lose his balance and he fell from the car. In falling, his hand came in contact with the last car of the opposite train. Thence he was thrown back upon the other track, that train having passed. Both trains were stopped and all hands ran to the place expecting to find Conductor Cook ground to pieces. Their surprise and delight may be imagined when it was discovered that he was only bruised. His injuries compell him to be off duty to-day, but he will soon be quite well again.

Installation and Banquet.

The Lodge of the I. O. O. F., of this place, Thursday evening, installed the following officers:

N. G., Jno. Olewine.
V. G., Dr. H. K. Hoy.
A. S., A. C. Mingle.
R. S. to N. G., W. I. Fleming.
L. S. to N. G., H. H. Harshbarger.
R. S. S., John Miller.
L. S. S., J. A. Hazel.
R. S. to V. G., C. C. Eckert.
L. S. to V. G., William H. Miller.
Warden, D. I. Parsons.
I. G., Girard Minsker.
O. G., Bart Galbraith.

Mr. H. C. Weaver was elected representative to the Grand Lodge.

After the installation the officers-elect tendered the Lodge a banquet at Jacobs' oyster parlor. Ice cream, oysters, etcetera, were disposed of to the infinite satisfaction of all, and the entire affair was a grand success.

General Beaver at Leechburg.

The prettiest incident, thus far, of the present campaign occurred at Leechburg, Pa., on Wednesday. General Beaver was in the office of the Jenkins House. Unknown to him, the public schools of the place were closed for the afternoon and the children formed in line and marched through the hotel office. There they were met by the General Beaver who, although surprised, took each one by the hand, speaking a pleasant word. This was one of the most delightful and profitable exercises in which the school children could be engaged, for it is always an inspiration to young folks to look at a man like General Beaver and to know by his very appearance how brave and true he was when his country was in peril.

—The State Missionary Association of the Disciples of Christ was in session in Williamsport last week. The convention was unusually large. All parts of the State are represented by preachers and other delegates. A number from other States were present, among them Elder Robert Moffat, of Ohio, corresponding secretary of their general Missionary Society, and Elder O. G. Hertzog, state evangelist of New York. Also a couple of brethren from Persia.

—Base ball was the most interesting theme discussed Saturday morning by young men.

A Meeting of the Huntingdon Presbytery.

At a meeting of the Presbytery of Huntingdon, which was held in the Sinking Valley (Blair county) Presbyterian church, on Tuesday and Wednesday, of last week, a petition for the organization of a Presbyterian church at Coalport was received and a committee appointed to effect such an organization.

A meeting for the Sabbath school was held in the afternoon, at which Rev. William Laurie, D. D., was among the speakers.

Rev. C. S. Dewing was dismissed to the Presbytery of Boston.

On the committee of Sessional Records for Bellefonte, Sinking Valley and Lower Spruce Creek, Dr. S. M. Moore, Dr. D. K. Freeman and Elder Joseph Dysart were appointed.

Rev. Wm. Laurie, D. D., was made a member of the committee for McVeytown, Mt. Union and Shirleysburg. That for Lost Creek, Moshannon and Snow Shoe is composed of Revs. A. R. Parker, D. Conway, Elder J. F. Ellsworth.

Rev. Dr. Hamill and E. C. Humes were elected delegates to Synod.

Thomas E. Barr was received as a licentiate of Presbytery of Fort Wayne, and a call for his pastoral services from Snow Shoe and Moshannon was read and found in order, and the Presbytery decided to hold an adjourned meeting at Snow Shoe, on the 28th inst. at 11 a. m., in order to ordain him.

Hollidaysburg was chosen as the place of next stated meeting.

Rev. N. H. Miller asked for and obtained a dissolution of the pastoral relation between him and the church at Osceola, and was dismissed to the Presbytery of Bloomington. It was resolved to unite the churches of Little Valley and Milroy.

Unionville Items.

Jack Frost has been here and left his mark, but the fall crops are so nearly gathered that little damage was done.

The Friends fall term of school closed last week and the teacher, Miss Mary Griest, has gone to her home in Adams Co., Pa.

The borough schools opened on the 4th, inst. Mr. Jackson Smith, of Northumberland county, being teacher for the upper grade and Miss Mary Clark, of Eagleville, teacher of the primary.

On last Monday night an unsuccessful attempt was made by burglars to enter the store of A. J. & T. E. Griest, by boring through the front door, but before gaining an entrance they concluded to leave and we think if they had known of the fireworks just over their heads they would have left sooner.

S. B. Bathurst is enlarging his newly-purchased tin shop on the corner of Union and Chestnut Sts., by putting an addition to the rear which will give much more room for his tinware and stoves.

N. J. Hurley is improving his property on Allegheny St., by putting a new picket fence in front.

Daniel Hall was awarded the contract for building the abutments for the new county bridge to be built across Dewitt's run in this place, and he has men and teams at work bringing in large stones and preparing the foundation for the structure. J.

They Talked all Night.

There are two well known characters in this place famous thoughout all the town as interminable talkers. If either of them gets at a man they can quickly talk him to death, unless he is able to escape from them in some way. Last night, just after sunset, these two famous conversationalists got together on the front porch of one of them and began to gossip. The talk ran on and on while the shades of night deepened, and showed no evidence of cessation. The Telephone Exchange at 9 o'clock a. m. is nothing in comparison.

By and by one of them happened to look up in the midst of a sentence and saw a faint light in the direction of Bishop street.

"Gracious!" said he, "there is a big fire over there."

"Yes, there is, that's certain," replied the other.

They actually stopped talking and bent their eyes on the rising conflagration. Slowly it mounted upward toward the horizon and tinged the eastern hill-tops just between the mist. It was the break of day and the talkers went home to bed.

Rev. Hewitt at the Chicago Convention.

The following extract from a letter, just received from W. F. Bailey, of Galesburg, Ill., will be of interest to those of our readers who admire Rev. Jno. Hewitt, a former rector of the Bellefonte Episcopal church. He writes: "I want to tell you what a pleasant surprise we had yesterday (Tuesday, the 5th). Who should step into the store about 10 o'clock a. m. but Rev. Hewitt, who was on his way to the convention at Chicago. He stopped over between trains on purpose to see us and remained with us until 1.30 p. m. So we had him and Rev. Shimpton (the rector at Galesburg) to dinner with us and I assure you we had a pleasant time. His health, he says, has improved a hundred per cent, and he is delighted with the West."

—Wanted—about 300 able-bodied men to attend Democratic meetings. Only those with good lungs and ability to howl need apply. Good pay to those who give satisfaction.

Six Items from Philipsburg.

Look out for a grand surprise party on Second street soon.

Dr. G. F. Hoop is in Bellefonte on a business tour.

Victor Gray is home from Philadelphia.

The Philipsburg band played for the picnic at Houtzdale on Thursday.

Never before were grapes known to be so abundant in this vicinity as they are now.

The funeral services over the remains of the late ex-Sheriff Munson were attended by as many people as were ever seen before in this place on such an occasion.

SOME ONE.

Another Candidate for Congress.

It is rumored that several prominent Democrats are urging Hon. L. A. Mackey, of Lock Haven, to run as an independent candidate for Congress. If he should conclude to do so, Hall might have to spend more money than he received at the last campaign. Mr. Mackey has been in Congress and made one of the best representatives in the State. For this reason we would not like to see him a candidate, as he might be a really dangerous opponent to the Republican candidate, which Hall certainly is not.

Death of Mrs. Holter.

Mrs. John Holter, of Howard, died at half past 4 o'clock on Thursday afternoon, of cancer. She was 34 years of age. Her husband, who survives her, will feel deeply the removal from him of his life companion.

Deceased was a sister of Mr. Valentine Smith of this place. She was a Christian lady, of a most amiable and lovable character. Her decease will cause sorrow among a large circle of friends.

The funeral services occurred on Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

JAS. H. DOBBINS, P. M.

—John G. Love, of Bellefonte, candidate for Assembly on the Republican side of the house, dropped into the "burg" on Tuesday evening. Mr. Love is a pleasant and agreeable gentleman, a brilliant lawyer, and a flowery speaker, and if elected to the office he aspires to, will make an able representative.—Philipsburg Journal.

—The prevailing domestic work at present is house cleaning. Carpets are out in every direction and as the rod sweeps through the air and comes in contact with the carpet the dust flies away in clouds. It is a disagreeable proceeding, but means future cleanliness and comfort.

—A new crossing is being laid across Allegheny street on Bishop street. It is the same kind which was put down on the north side of Bishop some time ago. Bayard & Cunningham are doing the work. That kind of crossing seems to wear pretty well.

My Daughter and myself, great sufferers from catarrh, were cured by Ely's Cream Balm. My sense of smell is rest red.—C. M. Stanley, Shoe Dealer, Ithica, N. Y.

I was troubled with catarrh for fifteen years. Ely's Cream Balm has opened my nostrils and reduced the inflamation—my eyes can now stand strong light. N. Fegley, Wilkesbarre, Pa.

For several years I have been troubled with catarrh. Ely's Cream Balm has proved to be the article desired. I believe it the only cure.—L. B. Coburn, Merchant, Towanda, Pa.

—Dr. Frank Christy, of Altoona, who is well known in the social circles of this place, narrowly escaped injury or death in a collision on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad a few days ago. He jumped from the train and thus escaped unhurt.

A Walking Skeleton.

Mr. E. Springer, of Mechanicsburg, Pa., writes "I was afflicted with lung fever and abscess on lungs, and reduced to a walking skeleton. Got a free trial bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, which did me so much good that I bought a dollar bottle. After using three bottles found myself once more a man, completely restored to health, with a hearty appetite, and a gain in flesh of 48 lbs."

Call at J. ZELLER & SON'S drug store and get a free trial bottle of this certain cure for all lung diseases. Large bottles $1.00.

SEVEN WONDERS.

1st. Everybody wonders how it is we can manufacture a COMPLETE ANIMAL BONE PHOSPHATE and sell it at the low price of $25 per ton, in new bags delivered free on board car or boat at Philadelphia.

2d. Farmers wonder how we discovered just the proper combination of elements required to produce the needed results at the lowest cost.

3d. Those who use Baugh's $25 Phosphate, appreciate its value as a crop-producer, and wonder why any one believes the spiteful and jealous competitors who attack and vilify by false statements, in order to sell their own goods.

4th. Farmers are the best judges, they use the fertilizers. They know and freely testify to the wonderful results obtained from the use of Baugh's Celebrated $25 PHOSPHATE.

5th. The rapid and wonderful growth of its sales, in every section of the country, is another powerful evidence of its true worth.

6th. Others wonder what Baugh's New Process is, that enables them to furnish a $25 RAW BONE SUPER-PHOSPHATE. There is nothing mysterious about it, it is simply A PROCESS OF PERFECT ECONOMY; the result of combined practical tests of farm, factory and laboratory, accomplished through a long experience.

7th. The Seventh Wonder is greatest of all—why other makes, that are offered at low price, do not become popular like the OLD RELIABLE, ACTIVE and PERMANENT BAUGH'S $25 PHOSPHATE.

The sum and substance of the whole matter is: Baugh's $25 Phosphate is second to none in Crop Value.

ESTIMATED VALUATIONS VARY AND ARE IN A GREAT MEASURE IMAGINARY.

We have our own Laboratory at the Delaware River Chemical Works, and two Chemists constantly employed there working out scientific theories, and our practical knowledge gained by about 50 years on the farm and over 30 years as manufacturers of fertilizers.

Terms, $2.00 per annum in Advance

Local Department.

—The revival meetings in the Methodist church continue.

—Would that these golden October days could continue forever.

—Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Valentine and Mr. Charley Valentine are at Atlantic City.

—The great crowd of people in town rendered Tuesday an excellent day for candidates.

—As soon as the ruins of the glass works are cool let the work of rebuilding begin at once.

—The most striking and brilliant literary production of the present day is the average circus advertisement.

—Saturday was pay day at the nail works. The monthly recurrence of pay day puts considerable money into circulation.

—The glass works circulated from $45,000 to $50,000 in Bellefonte annually. Can our business men afford to lose that amount?

—We are authorized to say that the public-spirited citizens of the town are organizing a stock company to rebuild the glass works.

—We believe that several thousand dollars can at once be secured as the beginning of a glass works erection fund if the proper efforts are made.

—We are informed that the seeming weakness of the streams of water that were thrown on the glass works fire was not caused by insufficiency of the supply in the reservoir.

—There were only two or three pupils in each of the public schools Tuesday, so they were dismissed about 3 o'clock. All the young folks went to see Forepaugh's show.

—Mr. J. D. Seibert is one of the best looking young men in Bellefonte, but he has appeared handsomer than ever since Saturday. The reason is, we suppose, that a baby son came to his house on Saturday.

—The circus-going people of Centre county are a reading people. To prove this, we received several new subscribers for both the Republican and DAILY NEWS Tuesday and numerous old subscribers paid up.

—Mr. A. C. Tonner, (better known here as Clarke Tonner) of Canton, Ohio, arrived in Bellefonte on Saturday evening and will visit for a week or ten days at the home of his sister, Mrs. Henry Harris, on Howard street.

—Many people congregated at the ruins of the glass works on Sunday during church hours. It would have been a good place for a missionary to have delivered a sermon with a very impressive text in the dying embers to discourse upon.

—The citizens of Bellefonte are reputed to be wise in their day and generation. They are sometimes thought to be good business men. If they do not rebuild the glass works at once they will show themselves to be "penny wise and pound foolish."

—It seems that all the men who gain either fame or notoriety were born in Centre county. Now we are informed that J. K. P. Hall, that terrible Democratic candidate for Congress, was born in Milesburg, this county, in 1844. Well, we suppose if it is really so, Centre county will have to put up with it —A rousing Republican meeting was held at Holt's Hollow, near Milesburg, on Friday evening. Clem. Dale and Jno. G Love, Esqs., were the speakers and made strong and able addresses, thoroughly arousing the enthusiasm of the voters. Every village and hamlet will give majorities this year for Beaver and the entire ticket.

—The store of H. I. Barnes at Nittany Hall was entered by burglars on Saturday night and the following articles were taken: A quantity of lace goods; a silver watch, which had no spring and the second hand of which was missing; postage stamps and pocket knives. A reward of $25 is offered for the arrest of the robber or robbers. We understand that certain parties are suspected.

—Mrs. Aaron Williams, accompanied by her brother, Mr. Fisher, departed Monday evening for Indiana, where Mrs. W. will visit her relatives. Mr. Fisher will continue his journey to Colorado, where Mr. Williams is now looking after his business interests. Mr. Fisher expects to remain in Colorado permanently. Since Mr. Fisher has been here he has been much pleased with our town and people, and rather regrets to leave. We hope that all parties will have a safe journey and a pleasant time.

—The Republican state committee met at headquarters in Philadelphia Wednesday and encouraging reports were heard from all over the state. The committee settled the difficulty in the Twenty-sixth congressional district, composed of the counties of Crawford, Butler and Mercer, where the conferrees could not agree, by nominating Dr. Roberts, of torpedo fame, for congress. There was some "kicking" by Mercer county, but on taking a ballot only two or three dissenting votes were cast.

SWEPT BY FLAMES.

The Most Calamitous Fire that ever Occurred in this Place.

THE GLASS WORKS DESTROYED ON SUNDAY MORNING—SEVENTY-FIVE MEN THROWN OUT OF EMPLOYMENT.

The alarm of fire was given at four o'clock Sunday morning, but only a few people heard it. Early Sunday morning is the time of all the week when perhaps people are wrapt in the most profound slumber. Such must have been the case in this instance, as the flames which destroyed the vast frame structures in which the Bellefonte Glass Company carried on operations must have burned with frightful rapidity and with a bright glare. Those who did hear the fire bell and looked for the flames could not see them as an impenetrable fog shut out all objects from view.

The origin of the fire is not certainly known, but it is believed to have been incendiary. It started between packing room and the office. The flames were first discovered by Joseph Luft, the regular watchman. A watchman is kept in the buildings all the time and since the fires have been put in the furnace two have been on guard constantly. Mr. Luft saw the fire breaking out through the roof and at once gave the alarm. He aroused persons living near by and sent a man to town to spread the alarm while all hands got the hose and other fire appliances in readiness. The buildings and contents being combustible, the fire spread rapidly, and it was impossible to fight it with any show of success, although some property was saved, including 2,000 boxes of glass. The destruction of the buildings was almost total and the loss is roughly estimated at $50,000.

To give an adequate idea of the vastness and value of

it should be known that the main factory which was the most conspicuous building, was very high and its proportions were 75x85 feet. West of this and communicating above the railroad which extended between the two structures was a long, low building containing the flattening room, packing room and cutting room. It was 50x120 feet. The box shed was 32x50 feet, glass ware house 30x140 feet, pot room 36x75, clay mill 30 feet square and the batch room 20x50 feet. In the pot room were 52 pots which were very valuable and all were destroyed. The German clay is also costly and there was a full set of stones for a new furnace. These with one thousand boxes of glass of various sizes, all the tools and many other articles which go to make up a complete glass factory became the prey of the flames. The

is interesting. They were built in 1868 at a cost of $60,000. After an existence of thirteen years which was not one of continuous prosperity, the present company took possession as lessees. The company is composed of Hammon Sechler, John Ardell, Jr., H. S. Sayre, Emil Joseph, J. Kyle McFarlane, W. R. Teller, John Anderson, Nicholas Redding and L. T. Munson. John Ardell, Jr., is president of the company, J. Kyle McFarlane secretary and treasurer, and L. T. Munson manager. The board of directors is composed of Messrs. Sechler, McFarlane, Teller, Jno. Anderson and John Ardell, Jr., of which the last mentioned is chairman. The term of the company as lessees continued until June of this year when the works were purchased of the original owners. During the five years that the present company has had possession the works have been in successful operation, and have manufactured more glass than any other single factory in the country. During the eastern and western strikes the Bellefonte Glass factory did not discontinue operations. Seventy-five men are employed, most of whom make very high wages. They were paid regularly every Saturday night. A large percentage of the employes are married men with families. They are a class of men who spend money freely and all of their earnings were spent in Bellefonte. Last Thursday night fire was put in the furnaces, preparatory to beginning the season's work. The loss is the most calamitous which could have happened in Bellefonte and is particularly distressing and aggravating at this time. It will be felt, first of all, by the workmen who, considering the circumstances in their most favorable light, will be deprived of work for two or three months, and, secondly, by the town. The glass works was as useful and beneficial an institution as any in the town, perhaps the most beneficial. As the crowds of people viewed the ruins on Sunday and thought of what this industry has done and was still doing for the town up to the hour of the dire calamity, the fact that it was indispensable to our business interests took poseession of every mind. We can announce with authority that and that this may be accomplished will require the united efforts and encouragement of every citizen, especially of those with spare cash. Consult the names of the men who compose the company and you will notice that they are not the capitalists of the town. On every hand it is conceded that it is due to the men employed, and to the business importance of Bellefonte that this great industry shall arise from its ruins and be perpetuated. Substantial words of encouragement have already been received. Let them continue and let no citizen who has the ability hold back. The insurance on the buildings and contents is about $20,000. It is believed they can be replaced in a suitable manner for $25,000. With quick and energetic work this can be done by the first of next January. The company not having held a meeting, have not taken definite action, but all of them express themselves favorable to renewed effort.

PASSING NOTES AND FLYING RUMORS.

The safe was opened Monday morning and the books and papers were found in good condition.

We understand that the employes, if they can obtain work at their trade in other places until January 1, will accept it. Others who desire it will be given work on the new buildings.

The fire must have been caused by a spark from a match or cigar by some tramp who may have been hanging about the building.

The rumor that a man was burned to death in the fire is not credited by many people. Tom McCloy, a drunken individual who has been in this neighborhood, is missing since the fire. Some persons say that human bones have been found in the ruins.

Some Sunday Services.

Rev J. O. Davis, the new rector of Episcopal church, delivers sermons which are notable for their clear and able interpretation of the real meaning of the words of Scripture. Every sermon displays new beauties in the sacred Word, which really contains so much more than an ordinary reading of it leads us to suppose. His morning sermon Sunday was on the miracle of the raising from the dead the son of the widow of Nain. He spoke of the way the ancient Israelites looked upon death. This was instructive. Then speaking of the three instances related of Christ restoring the dead to life, he said they showed a progression, and illustrate the several degrees of sin from which the Saviour can restore us. And the terrible truth was brought out that unless we repent we shall surely sink from one degree to another of sin until we reach that degradation illustrated by the condition of Lazarus, and will be bound by sin as Lazarus was by the grave clothes. The evening discourse was about the Christian as the salt of the earth. In this he showed plainly that in every condition of life people can make the world better and it is their duty to do so. Unless they do so they will be fit for nothing but to be cast out and trodden under foot.

Rev. Wm. Laurie, D. D., of the Presbyterian church, and Rev. D. S. Monroe, D. D., of the Methodist church, exchanged pulpits Sunday morning. We have heard Dr. Monroe's sermon spoken of as a remarkably able and eloquent discourse and it produced a profound and lasting impression. It was from the familiar text, "God sent not His Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through Him might be saved."

A Sensational Telegram.

The following telegram which appeared in a Sunday paper, caused some comment:

UNIONVILLE, Oct. 9.—One of the most exciting events that has occurred at this place for many years was the discovery of a body hanging suspended at the end of a rope in the passenger station on Monday morning. The dead man, whose name was Metable, was sent from Philadelphia to perform a certain duty that no one else could do, and had been in the employ of the railroad company for many years. What is a most remarkable feature in the case is that more than twenty persons passed in and out of the station without noticing the body hanging, so close to the wall was he suspended. Not until John C. Rumberger, the agent, who was looking up some information concerning certain trains, came in was he discovered. The alarm was given and the coroner notified. A jury was at once sworn and a verdict of "death caused by suspended animation" rendered. The deceased was closely related to a man who had been run over by the cars at this place some time ago.

It is almost unnecessary to add that the telegram is a complete sell. If the initials T. I. are placed before the name Metable any one will see that it reads time table. It was a time table (only that and nothing more) that died of "suspended animation."

Betting on Elections.

In his charge to the Grand Jury recently Judge Yerkes, of Bucks county, referred to the crime of betting on the result of elections, as follows: "While the offence may not have been committed in the county within your knowledge since the last term, yet we are approaching the season of the year when there is danger that the law against betting may be violated innocently by the people who do not know of the existence of the law. The offence of betting, or offering to bet on the results of any election within this commonwealth is punishable by a fine of $500. This law applies to betting on a primary election as well as upon a general election. It is made a duty of the Grand Jury to return this offence without any information being laid before them. I call attention to it now in order that no person may fall into error by committing this offence innocently."

—Mr. Bowen, the Assistant State Secretary of the Y. M. C. A., arrived in Bellefonte Saturday evening and was at the regular association meeting Sunday afternoon. He will remain until after the secretaries' conference.

The Prohibitionist Delusion.

We have received from a lady who signs herself "One of the Women" a defense of the recent action of Mrs. Emmons in making a political speech under the guise of prohibition, in Stormstown, which action was criticised in a communication from that place. As she holds views that may be held by some other people in her vicinity, we will give our attention to some of her utterances. One of her sentences is:

If the Republicans want the W. C. T. U. to work for them they must keep liquor dealers at least off their tickets.

We never heard that the Republicans wanted the W. C. T. U. to work for them. What our correspondent complained of was that Mrs. Emmons, a representative of the W. C. T. U., was working for the Democrats. We do not think it is the province of the W. C. T. U. to do political work. Think of it. Analyze it. The name W. C. T. U. implies union temperance work done by Christain women. In union there is strength. In temperance there is needed reform. In Christain there is a perfect rule of right. In women there is worth and refinement.

Pray tell us where you can find in this any authority to support the Democratic ticket? Our fair friends should rejoice if a liquor dealer be placed on the Republican ticket. In that respect it is a great extenuation of his character. Like apples of gold in pitchers of silver. Again she writes:

Mr. Wolf is an earnest Christian gentleman and cannot be bought.

How do you know? There are charges against him that he is paid by the Democrats, and it is quite well known that he gets $25 per night for every speech he delivers.

We quote again:

The Democratic party goes "Scott free" because it does not pretend to be a temparance party while the other does.

This shows that our fair writer has an imperfect understanding of the matter.

The Republican party knows that when a respectable body of citizens ask for a thing it should be tried, and further knows that in the decision of questions majorities should rule.

It has understood all along that the so-called prohibition element have asked for the right to vote on the question and has committed itself to give that right. Having granted that right, it will remain with the people to decide whether or not they want prohibition. We have been a prohibitionist all our life and have always entertained the highest respect for the W. C. T. U. But if this lady correctly voices its sentiments, we must confess that it does not seem to know exactly what it does want.

The Y. M. C. A. Secretaries.

The gentlemen who figure in the capacity of Y. M. C. A. Secretaries throughout Pennsylvania arrived in Bellefonte Tuesday morning, and although they became very much mixed up with Forepaugh's circus, they at last found their way to the Association hall, where an excellent dinner was served, and immediately thereafter they were conducted to their homes where they remained while here. So far as we could obtain the list, they were located as follows:

At ex-Judge Adam Hoy's, J H Manning, of Harrisburg, and W S Speece, of Titusville.

At F W Crider's, S M Bard and S L Harter, of Wilkesbarre.

At John P Harris', S K McKee and U S Greaves, of Pittsburg.

At Judge A O Furst's, R A Orr and W B Sheriff, of Pittsburg.

At H Y Stitzer's, W F Forester and H Robinson, of Sharpsburg.

At Isaac Mitchell's, J R King, of Altoona, and C C Wright, of Erie.

At J H Potter's, J H Auckerman, of Altoona.

At H K Hicks, L R Swett, of Erie.

At Geo L Potter's, J C Simms, of Williamsport, and C A Parkinson, of Erie.

At F P Green's, Asst. State Secretary, Bowen of Harrisburg, and Allen Swalley, of Erie.

At D S Keller's, J B Esenwine, of Reading.

At C F Cook's, D Beidleman, of Corry.

At J W Gephart's, W E Flynn, of Carlisle.

At Dr. J W Rhone's, W E Waite, of Germantown, and W H Parker, of Philadelphia.

At M W Cowdrick's, J A McKnight, of Allentown.

At Dr. R L Dartt's, W W Calender, of Pittsburg, and John H Holt, of Scranton.

At E M Blanchard's, two Philadelphia secretaries.

At General Beaver's, Rev. S A Taggert, of Pittsburg, and Arthur Lucas, of Scranton.

At James Harris', T T Horney and Arthur Pentecost, of Scranton.

—The Hebrew population observed their holiday Saturday by carefully abstaining from business. Owing to the fact that they have no rabbi here or other person to officiate at religious services, we believe they do not observe the occasion with that religious ceremony which is the rule in larger places. Bellefonte has reason to be proud of its Hebrew population. They are good business men, model citizens and their families are polite and refined. They add greatly to Bellefonte's business importance and they contribute their presence to our social life. They are broad-minded and liberal, and it is a pleasure to know them in any relation in life.

PATTON FOR CONGRESS—NO NOMINATION FOR SENATOR.

The Republican Congressional Conference.

The conference which met on Wednesday in the Bush House was in session only a short time, and Gen. John Patton, of Curwensville, was made the nominee It was accomplished as follows:

Capt. John V. Miller, of Union county, was made chairman of the conference, and B. E. Cartwright, of Elk county, and Andrew Strode, of Mifflin county, were chosen secretaries.

Major Geo. Weymouth, of Clinton county, nominated Gen. John Patton, and his nomination was seconded by Thos. H. Murray, of Clearfield Co., and others.

Col. D. H. Hastings nominated Col. James P. Coburn, and Jno. F. Duncan, of Union county, put in nomination the name of Dr. T. C. Thornton, of Union.

Mr. Duncan withdrew Dr. Thornton and Col. Hastings withdrew Mr Coburn.

Then, on motion of Col D H. Hastings, the nomination of Gen. John Patton was made by acclamation.

After these proceedings were so satisfactorily ended, Col. Coburn and Dr. Thornton were called in and made strong and eloquent speeches to the conference, pledging themselves and their influence to the ticket.

The names of the Congressional conferees are: Clearfield county, Herman Haupt, Hon. Thos. Murray and W. C. Arnold; Union county, Jno. K Kremer, J. V. Miller and Jno. F. Duncan; Mifflin county, A. C. Strode, J. A. Campbell and John McDowell; Clinton county, O. A. Harvey, George Weymouth and C. H. Rich; Elk Co., B. B. Cartwright; Centre county, D. H. Hastings, Jno. Kline and W H Wigton.

The Senatorial Conference.

The conferees of the 34th Senatorial district met in the office of D. S. Keller, Esq., Bellefonte, Wednesday at 2 o'clock. Those present were Samuel I. Burge, John Truman, J. W. Leonard, of Clearfield county; O. A. Harvey, of Clinton county; D. S. Keller, D. B. Kunes and Austin Curtin, of Centre county.

J. W. Leonard was elected chairman and Austin Curtin secretary. On motion of D. S. Keller, the conferee from Clinton was allowed to cast three votes, owing to but one being present from that county. A. O. Harvey offered the following:

"Resolved, That it is inexpedient for this conference to nominate a candidate for Senator at this time." Messrs. Harvey and Leonard spoke on the resolution and agreed that owing to complication in the district it is inexpedient. The resolution passed by a unanimous vote and no nomination was made.

Mr. Harvey moved that the conference adjourn sine die.

J. W. LEONARD, Chairman.
AUSTIN CURTIN, Secretary.

—Just think of it—Anderson, Ardell, Sechler, Munson, McFarlane, Redding, Sayre, Joseph and Teller were the public-spirited citizens who invested their money in one of the chief of Bellefonte's industries, and kept it going for five years. There are citizens who are as rich as all these men put together. What did they ever do for Bellefonte? What business industry will be a monument to their memory? When we choose officials, such as senators, congressmen, etc., we believe they should be chosen from among the men who are willing to multiply industries for the good of their fellow-men; not to choose the men who keep their money in bonds, lands, banks, etc. If these men of means permit such an institution as the glass works to slumber in its ruins they will prove themselves undeserving the respect and emulation of anyone.

—Mr. Alexander Whiteman, when he returned home from Philadelphia, brought with him five carrier pigeons. They are owned by Mr. James Work, of No. 1111 Lehigh Avenue, Philadelphia, and are of the best kind, having been imported from Antwerp, Germany. Three of them are five months old, one three months old and one only two months old. Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock Mr. Whiteman gave them their freedom from the Diamond Square in this place. We did not see the interesting proceeding, but Mr. Whiteman promises to inform us as soon as one of them reaches its home and we will then report the time it made.

The Gold Mines of Alaska.

An experienced mineralogist and mining engineer, who has just returned from Alaska, writes Mr. James Milliken (of our town) within the past few days as follows: "I found in Alaska the largest free gold mines in our country, or elsewhere within my knowledge, and one of the largest mills in the world—one hundred and twenty stamps—forty-eight free Vanner Vellnd plates, and chlorination works in the plant, and the cheapest cost of mining and milling gold within my experience."

—We are informed that George Washington Rees deserves great credit for the success of the secretaries' banquet on Tuesday. When Mr. Rees starts in to do anything he leaves no stone unturned to its successful accomplishment. That's right, Rees; keep at it.

Personal Pencilings.

S. H. Williams has returned from Pittsburg.

Prof. Bierly is instructing music classes at Rebersburg and Millheim.

Cyrus Gordon, Esq., of Clearfield, looked at the circus parade here Tuesday.

Mrs. Ella Sheets, of Williamsport, is visiting at the residence of Mrs. Fees, on Reynolds Avenue.

Mrs. McKee, wife of Prof. McKee, of State College, was among those who visited Bellefonte Thursday.

Editor Frank P. Bible is able to ride down to his office almost daily. He even attended the meeting Wednesday evening.

H. D. Seely, a lumberman living at Forge Run, between Beaver and Philipsburg, visited Bellefonte Thursday morning.

Mrs. Mary Gibson, of Geneva, New York, is a guest at the home of John Ardell Jr. Mrs. Gibson is an aunt of Mrs. Ardell.

Mr. Charles Glenn, the photographer, is now located at Baileyville, this county, but made a pilgrimage to Bellefonte to see the show.

Mr. Thomas White and his sister, Miss Annie White, of Shippensburg, Pa., are guests at the residence of Mr. W. T. Speer on Lamb street.

Miss Dora B. Finch, of Unionville, has been visiting her sister in Milesburg during the past three weeks. She was in Bellefonte on Thursday.

Mr. Jacob Valentine is making steam heat connection with his residence on High street and will be comfortable when cold weather comes.

Witmer Wolf and Mr. Smith, both of Centre Hall, visited Bellefonte Wednesday evening. The latter is foreman in the office of the Centre County Times.

Edwin Elder, a very pleasing young gentleman from Pine Grove Mills, was among the great throng who helped to make Tuesday a lively day in Bellefonte.

Henry Vingard, of Coburn, only comes to Bellefonte about once a year, and, of course, he didn't miss the circus to-day. Come again, Henry, and stay longer next time.

Miss May, a bright and accomplished young lady from Emporium, Pa., is the guest of Miss Lizzie Morrison. Miss May has favored Bellefonte with her presence on several former occasions.

Rev. D. S. Monroe, D. D., was unanimously elected secretary of the district conference of the Altoona district, Central Penn'a Conference, which was in session at Hollidaysburg Wednesday.

The legislative candidates Rhone and Woodward attended the Democratic powwow on Wednesday evening. As they looked into the cold glare of the electric light it seemed to speak only words of defeat.

Jesse Richards, of the Philipsburg Journal, so greatly admires Bellefonte that he comes here once a week. He came Wednesday evening to see if the Democratic candidate for Governor is as Black as he is painted.

Saturday morning Mrs. Clem Dale and baby departed for a visit with friends in Philadelphia. Mrs. Dale is a very accomplished and agreeable lady and we hope she will enjoy her visit. Of course, Master Baby will be delighted, it being the first time he has seen the Quaker City.

—Protracted services began Saturday in the Methodist church. There was a meeting that morning and there was another in the evening. We understand that the meetings will continue all this week. We hope they will be very successful and we trust that the Methodist congregation will attend in large numbers. We have no doubt also that Rev. Dr. Monroe and all the Methodists will be very glad to see persons present who do not belong to any church. Attend these services; let nothing keep you away; and they will do you good.

—It is hoped that the revival services now in progress in the Methodist church will infuse new life into the religious affairs of this borough. Our churches and all other religious organizations have been leading a very precarious existence for some time now, getting along at a poor dying rate and not measuring up to their usefulness. It is unnecessary for us to speak particularly or to state wherein each one is lacking; all of us will rejoice at any renewed vitality.
